England Learned Espionage Lesson During War—Military Secrets of John Bull Carefully Guarded Now

Profession as Old as World, But Late War Developed Race of Super-Spies That Made History

PARIS, Jan. 16. (UP)—England learned a lesson during the World War when she took the field in France to find an enemy which knew nearly as much about her army as her own war office.

So much has England seen able to hide of her movements that only a few months ago when a picked group of guests was invited to sit at the edge of a field and watch maneuvers by some new war instruments the rest of Europe was taken completely by surprise.

Europe "Tipped Off"—Britain has not always been so fortunate, and although the utmost efforts were used to keep secret the first use of airplanes on submarines, a careless official in a government office "tipped off" the rest of Europe.

No other nation had conceived the idea of making a folding airplane which could be taken into the shell of a submarine, and then unfolded to fly away from the sub on the surface to scout, or attack. The idea was original in Europe at least. But one day the London Gazette

Ford, new military attacks at the American embassy in Paris, recently publicly exposed the role of the army and navy attaches abroad. He is a former chief of U. S. military intelligence.

"The intelligence service of the armies and navies are an outgrowth of the necessity all governments feel of knowing what their neighbors are doing," General Ford said.

"In the war department that agency is the military intelligence division commonly known as 'G-2.' But there is a distinction between information and intelligence. Information becomes intelligence when it has been evaluated and placed in usable form.

"There are many sources of information, but they can be classed under three heads:

First: The printed word, magazines, publications, documents and newspapers.

Second: Other government departments, the state, navy, commerce and justice departments with which we work very closely.

Third: The greatest arm of the information service, the military attaché service.

Attache Network
Today the United States government has a network of 39 military attaches in various parts of the world. Those attaches include what we call the "special assistants," officers selected from particular branches, such as the chemical and ordnance services. These attaches are stationed in 22 foreign capitals and in their reports they consider 48 countries.

"The procuring of military data is quite simple as to process. The securing of information is usually on the exchange basis—that is to say, the government desires its representative to obtain a certain item of information. That information is furnished provided similar information is furnished by us.

"For example, if a foreign government desires that one of its representatives visit one of our arsenals for the purpose of observing

MIDDLEWEIGHT HAS BIGGER ARM THAN THE HEAVIES

Len Harvey, British middleweight, has a forearm that measures the four best American heavyweights.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16. (AP)—A "queer 'un" proper has lit on these shores.

It is Len Harvey, British middleweight, who contrary to British custom, isn't a member of the "jab and grab" school of fighting.

Harvey starts his campaign for American dollars with a reputation as a slugger, a reputation, if his handlers are to be believed, based on 200 knockout victories in 350 fights in England.

Whether Harvey pans out or is knocked out, he at least starts with something that New York boxing heads are seeking frantically. That is "color."

In training for his American debut against Vance Dundee of Baltimore, Harvey refused to wear a head gear. He says it might get him in the habit of neglecting to block punches.

He also had to have a Welsh rarebit every night before going to bed, which in the eyes of American conditioners is the last word in folly.

But the thing that really catches the eye is the abnormal development of his arms.

He has a forearm that measures 14 inches, which is larger than that of the best four American heavyweights of recent years. At the Dempsey-Tunney fight for the heavyweight championship in 1927 at Chicago, Tunney's forearm tapered 13 1/2 inches, and Dempsey's 13 inches.

Jack Sharkey's arm measured 13 inches and Young Stribling's a quarter of an inch less when they met down at Miami in 1929.

Harvey got his abnormal development from polishing automobiles 12 hours a day, before he clicked as a fighter.

He capitalizes on this strength by boxing in and tying up his opponent's left with his right hand, and whaling away with his left.

Harvey has been fighting since the age of 12, and had a reputation in England when Jackie "Kid" Berg was fighting preliminaries. His record includes appearances in 20-round bouts 23 times and those of 15 rounds 47 times.

Dog Saves Life Of Recluse Master

CLINTON, Ia., Jan. 16. (UP)—J. R. Lucas, 75, who lives in a tent on the fringes of the city dump, was saved from burning to death by his dog, Jack.

Sparks from a stove pipe ignited the tent while Lucas slept. Seeing his master undisturbed while flames enveloped the tent, Jack rushed through the flames, pulled Lucas' sleeve and barked until he had awakened Lucas.

Farmer Scorns Autos And Sticks to Oxen

HOPKINTON, N. H., Jan. 16. (UP)—George E. Patch, farmer, would rather have a one-legged ox than a dozen automobiles.

Proof of this assertion might be found at Patch's farm where thirteen yoke of oxen are employed to do various work. In the winter, Patch rents out three or four yoke to neighbors and keeps the others engaged in hauling cord wood from the woods.

HAWTHORNE AMMUNITION DEPOT WORK

Mine Filling Plant and Storage Dam Still To Be Built

A contract has just been awarded to C. F. Dismore & Co., Ogden, Utah, for a complete mine filling plant for $333,800. Bids will be opened in March, 1931, for a 120-foot high arch dam, estimated to cost $165,000. This will be in Cat Creek canyon and will store 50 million gallons of water, and will supplement the Rose creek water supply now in use.

Since July 1, $983,000 has been expended on work at the station. This does not include the pay of officers nor the pay and subsistence of enlisted personnel. With the exception of the mine filling plant and the dam, the construction work is 95 per cent complete. The estimated total cost of the construction of the station is $2,950,000. The regular station personnel complement is 104 persons, including six officers and 66 enlisted men. In addition, 54 civilians are temporarily employed on construction work besides contractor's gangs. The station was placed in commission September 15, 1929. The first shipment of ammunition was received October 20, 1930.

Parisians Prove It When Train Is Late

PARIS, Jan. 16. (AP)—When Paris commuters tell the boss their train was late they have to produce documentary evidence in support.

Every time a train from the suburbs is delayed, officials give out slips on which are shown the time and place of departure and the exact time of arrival at the terminus.

Mrs. W. Fisher, who has been seriously ill for the past week, was removed to a local hospital Wednesday.

T. M. Carroll is in Reno in attendance on the annual meeting of the Nevada State Real Estate board. He expects to reach home Tuesday of Wednesday.

Sam Friedman, proprietor of the popular Fogarty, has returned from Los Angeles, where he spent several days buying new spring merchandise.
