Famine Stalks More Millions In North China

SHANGHAI, Feb. 20. (AP)—A prediction that another million people in the famine districts of Shensi province, North China, must die before spring unless a miracle happens, has been made by L. V. Cummings of the International Famine Relief commission.

Two million perished there within 12 months, he said. He saw little hope for the great majority of the survivors.

"The Chinese government could save them by mobilizing transportation for the necessary minimum of famine rations," said Cummings, "but the government has its hands full, fighting bandits and communists."

"Transportation is the sole cure for famine in Shensi. The present starvation resulted directly from a series of droughts and of locust invasions, but it could have been relieved had there been any method of getting supplies to the population."

"Not only are the roads utterly inadequate, but the province is so infested with bandits and soldiery that it is impossible to move large supplies of food from place to place."

"The provincial government has done little to relieve this condition, and the Nanking army divisions, sent there to chase bandits, are no better than the robbers when it comes to taking what they can get to eat. Sometimes the relief workers have had the protection of bandit gangs when soldier guards either were refused or proved useless."

Cummings, who spent the summer directing a gang of Chinese peasants in building a road for the relief commission traffic, now has been detailed to buy drought-resistant seed grain in the United States to be used this spring in Shensi.

He was born in Texas 38 years ago, saw service in several Latin-American revolutions and spent two years hunting big game in Africa.

He came to China last summer looking for excitement and found that the International Relief commission was the only medium by which foreigners could travel in the interior.

Nine O'Clock 'School Time' For Einstein

BY WALTER B. CLAUSEN PASADENA, Calif., Feb. 23. (AP)—

Albert Einstein's routine life for his two months in California primarily is that of a post-graduate student. That's the way he looks at it, and he shuns any diversions from it other than brief week-end trips for sight-seeing.

After breakfast he sits for a while to ponder, while Frau Elsa, his wife, rechecks the daily schedule. Four days out of the seven at least, it is about 9 o'clock when she says: "Albert, it's time to go," and she makes certain that he has his jacket on, instead of the sweater coat he wears around the house and that his straight-stemmed pipe is in his pocket.

Then with Dr. Walther Mayer, his colleague and scientific secretary, he walks the half-mile of tree-lined streets to the California Institute of Technology.

Sometimes a little earlier, if there is a 9 o'clock seminar to attend, but usually it is just to his cell-like office in the monastic building called the Norman Bridge laboratory of physics.

There he "thinks out loud" with Mayer, and writes, or rather works out equations in highest forms of mathematics, even inventing new mathematics at times to harmonize with his flights of thought.

Most days there are lectures or seminars at 11 in the morning and 4:30 in the afternoon. Einstein attends with other students, usually sitting in the first or second row. He follows closely the lectures, which are in English and when he does not understand, just like other students, he interrupts with a question.

His greatest interest has been in the weekly seminars at the Mount Wilson laboratory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington. This is about a mile from the Institute of Technology. At these conferences he always has questions to ask, and frequently gives suggestions.

East Differs From West On Basketball

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 23. (AP)—Coach Ott Romney, Brigham Young university, has very pronounced opinions on the brand of midwestern and eastern basketball as compared to the type of game played in the western division, Rocky Mountain conference.

"If," he observed, "you want to see methodical, machine-like basketball; if you want to see young men playing the game so subservient to system that their play resembles checkers or chess—then go east, young man, go east."

"But if you like your basketball done rare; if you like scoring bees, sensational playing, a few 'hope' shots and an occasional wild throw—then remain in the intermountain country, young man."

Romney referred to the fast breaking game of the western division and the mechanized game of the midwest and east. Of the latter he knows more than hearsay, for his team played its leading opponents on a pre-season barnstorming trip.

Don't Growl at Income Tax Blank; Pity Man Who 'Forgets,' Says U. S.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. (AP)—Don't tear your hair over that income tax report.

You're having heaps of fun, compared with the man who has to explain why he didn't make out a report last year.

Treasury officials offer that little thought to comfort men and women who are getting their report ready for filing before the March 16 deadline.

Elmer L. Ivey, whose position as chief of the intelligence unit of the bureau of internal revenue causes him to meet lots of persons who failed to make out correct reports, has figures to prove that most of them are sorry. Last year 96.7 per cent of those caught and indicted were convicted or pleaded guilty.

Results in one jurisdiction afford, he says, a definite idea of the odds against the violator. In that jurisdiction thirteen indictments were returned last year.

Seven violators were brought to trial and given prison sentences ranging from 18 months to five years. The rest are awaiting trial. There was not a single acquittal or mistrial.

While additional taxes and penalties collected run into millions of dollars, the salutary effect produced upon the community also is of far-reaching importance.

HOLLYWOOD'S FILM SHOP

By DUANE HENNESSY (United Press Staff Correspondent) HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 23. (AP)—Add to the list of sport figures to appear in motion pictures the name of Earle Sande, premier jockey and idol of thousands of turf followers.

He has signed with Warner Brothers, as has Bobby Jones, of golfing fame. Big Bill Tilden, the tennis ace, is to appear in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films.

The story selected for Sande has not been announced. Adolph Menjou is being kept busy on the M-G-M lot. He appears in English, French, Spanish and German talkies made there.

At present he and Lella Hyams are shooting "Among the Married." He is scheduled for "The Great Lover," also an English voice picture.

By NORRIS LEAP (United Press Staff Correspondent) FRESNO, Calif., Feb. 20. (AP)—The outstanding effect of over-production of farm products in central California appears to be a swing away from specialized fruit-growing to diversified farming of the sort that has made the middle west famous.

They still have their great orchards and vineyards here, but they also are looking to the pedigrees of their hogs and their muttons, and are discovering anew the fine art in raising prize potatoes and champion Indian corn.

A decade ago the dirt farmer of this territory was usually something of an aristocrat. He valued his property at so many thousand dollars an acre, and measured his profits yearly by the hundreds of dollar an acre.

Vineyards sold as high as $2,500 an acre, orange orchards at nearly twice that figure, peaches up to $1,000, and even dairy land at as high as $500. Uneveled raw land 25 miles from any town and with only the promise of the needed irrigation water brought $125 to $175 an acre.

As for hogs and corn, they were products for the middle west to raise and ship out here. Today the scene is somewhat different. Only the citrus men have held anything like their own, and C. C. Teague, farm board member and head of the largest citrus organization, has intimated the prosperity of the orange men.

There still are hundreds of thousands of acres in vineyards and peach, apricot, fig and plum orchards, but each year the orchardist and vineyardist has lost a few more of his tall feathers. Last year more than 320,000 tons of grapes were left to rot on the vines. Scores of thousands of tons of peaches molded on the ground. More than 150,000 acres of vines

Loaned Blood Keeps Him Alive

BLUEFIELD, Va., Feb. 18. (AP)—The case of Joseph B. Lawrence, Bluefield, sufferer from pernicious anemia, is attracting nationwide attention.

Lawrence appears a perfectly normal man, but not a drop of blood in his body is his own. Every bit was contributed by 20 other persons, and he has undergone 51 blood transfusions since Dec. 17, 1929. His system refuses to manufacture its own blood.

Lawrence, who before becoming ill weighed 210 pounds, now weighs 160, a gain of 44 pounds from December, 1929, when he weighed only 116. He looks well and drives his own automobile, but he cannot work and ever so often has to have more blood furnished to him.

In little more than a year he has gone through 94 operations, counting the transfusions of operations, has had more than 50 X-ray examinations and has been examined by a score of doctors.

He is 31, six feet tall and one of a family of seven children.
