

'Corral' Of Ancient 3-Toed Horses Found

TORRINGTON, Wyo., March 18. (AP)—One of the biggest corrals of the best is prehistoric—a place near here where lie the bones of thousands of three-toed horses.

YOUR BRAIN and YOUR HEALTH

By DR. LELAND B. ALFORD THE BALANCING MECHANISM

The drunken man staggers as he walks but occasionally the sick man does also. There is a balancing mechanism in the brain and when it is distorted we stagger like the drunk.

The center of this mechanism is three little canals in the ear. These contain fluid and act like the carpenter's level. Since they lie in three different planes we have exact information about the position of the head however it rests.

Nerves run inward from these canals to broadcast the news of the position of the head to all the parts of the nervous system that are concerned.

They run particularly to the cerebellum or little brain which regulates the tenseness of muscles, which obviously is intimately concerned with the position of the head in space.

Other fibers run down the spinal cord in order to keep in direct touch with muscles. Still others run to the very frontal region of the brain, for what purpose is not clear.

Interference with these canals or their system of nerves causes what is called ataxia. Ataxia is lack of accuracy in touching objects with the hands and feet. The drunken fellow suffers from ataxia as he staggers in the street.

Dizziness is another symptom of this mechanism. Sometimes the patient feels as if he is whirling around and sometimes the room seems to be turning. If he closes his eyes he doesn't know which direction is up or down or north or south.

The mechanism really tells us where we are—which end is up and when we are turning from south to west or in any other direction. When the mechanism is diseased we are lost.

In seasickness the mechanism is disturbed by the shaking of the fluid in the canals and when we turn around we become dizzy for the same reason.

If there is no disturbance we do not realize the balancing mechanism is in existence.

Duty First

Honeymoon or no honeymoon, Bill Boyd, the big blond movie hero, doesn't neglect business or duty. Bill was honeymooning in Honolulu a week ago with his recently acquired wife, the former Dorothy Sebastian, when word came that he was cast in a wild west picture and must start sprouting a beard post haste.

GUIDING YOUR CHILD

By MRS. AGNES LYNE DEVELOPING POISE

To bring up a child who is not unduly emotional, nervous, irritable or self-conscious is the objective of every thoughtful parent. But how does one avoid these faults, and develop instead the serenity and poise which are such assets in daily living?

As soon as we begin to regard him as a person with feelings, wishes and rights of his own, we can no longer treat him like a dearly beloved toy or a mere adjunct of our own personalities.

We respect his interests and do not unnecessarily interfere with them. We refrain from showing him off or otherwise making him perform merely for the sake of reflecting credit upon ourselves. We do not tease him, or in any way take advantage of his ignorance and inexperience to deceive and outwit him.

We demand of him only what is necessary and reasonable. We keep his confidence through being scrupulously fair in our dealings with him. We do not betray his secrets, no matter how amusing a tale they would make.

We give him always as much independence and responsibility as he can manage. We do not nag or humiliate him.

If he indulges in sulking or temper tantrums, we see to it that this kind of behavior brings him nothing that he desires. Wherever it is possible, we ignore such behavior.

CHRISTENING SCENE GIVES BABY ACTOR 'ROLE' FOR LIFE

Some day Wilfred James Edwin Bjorklund will learn that he was christened (top) in a Hollywood movie scene. In the picture he "played" as the son of Constance Bennett (below).

HOLLYWOOD, March 18. (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Filip Bjorklund of Culver City, near here, couldn't agree on a name for their six-months-old son.

One day a friend asked if they would like to have their baby appear in a motion picture. They brought him to the studio the following morning.

When they learned their son was to be christened as part of his first film role, it gave them the happy idea of letting the affair settle the name problem.

The motion picture name was Wilfred James Edwin, and although Mrs. Bjorklund is Swedish and Mr. Bjorklund Danish, the English names were satisfactory and have been legally recorded.

The ceremony, which temporarily made young Bjorklund Constance Bennett's son, was conducted by the camera with the full ritual of the Church of England by Edgar Sherrod, a retired Episcopalian minister and former archdeacon of the Atlanta diocese.

When we cannot do this, we send him into exile until he has made up his mind to be agreeable.

We give him no cause for jealousy, and make sure that he never at any time has reason to doubt his security in our affections.

27 VARIETIES OF 'KNOCKS' ARE FOUND IN GASOLINE DETROIT, March 13. (AP)—Discovery that there are at least 27 difference varieties of "knocks" in present gasoline is held as hopeful to the motorist. The identification of these knocks indicates remedies can be found. The knocks come from differences in the paraffin hydrocarbon contents of gasoline and are identified in a report to the American Chemical society by Wheeler G. Lovell, John M. Campbell and T. A. Boyd of the General Motors research laboratories here. They find the gasoline molecules are hooked together in chains, and that differing lengths of chains determine the qualities of the potential knocks. In Illinois last year 412,608 persons each paid 50 cents for fishing privileges.
