

HOLLYWOOD'S FILM SHOP

By RONALD W. WAGGONER (United Press Staff Correspondent)
HOLLYWOOD, April 24. (UP)—It seemed to Commander James Parker, Jr., of the Navy that wherever he went and told people about life and adventure on the seas some one always suggested that he write a book.

And, after so many years of that sort of thing, Commander Parker sat down and wrote a book. Not just an ordinary book, but one which was adaptable to the movies. "Seas Beneath" was the title of the officer's work. When John Ford, director for Fox Films, saw the manuscript he persuaded his company to buy it before it ever reached print.

When the picture was finished it appeared to spell the end of Commander Parker's naval life. He immediately was assigned to writing other stories for the talking screen.

Commander Parker led a highly colorful life during his naval career. After he was graduated from Annapolis he served in European waters, in the South Seas, Mexico, the Philippines and South America, Nicaragua, the Orient, Porto Rico. During the war Commander Parker was on a "mystery ship," a merchant marine vessel equipped with hidden guns. The mission of the "mystery ships" was the somewhat hazardous occupation of luring German submarines into an attack.

Commander Parker said he finds Hollywood "fantastic."

"I find it rather hard to work at top speed here," he said. "It offers so many amusements like golf which I missed during my years on a battleship."

Parker declared that girls he used to "drag" to hops at Annapolis and later people he met at Newport News, or in Hongkong, or Pensacola, always saw something romantic in navy life, which the officers seemed to miss.

"Why don't you write a book about this?" was the stock question, which Commander Parker explained every naval officer has heard hundreds of times.

"I finally got around to 'Seas Beneath,'" he said. "Now it appears that I am started. My next will be a story based upon actual happenings in China, where I was stationed for a number of years."

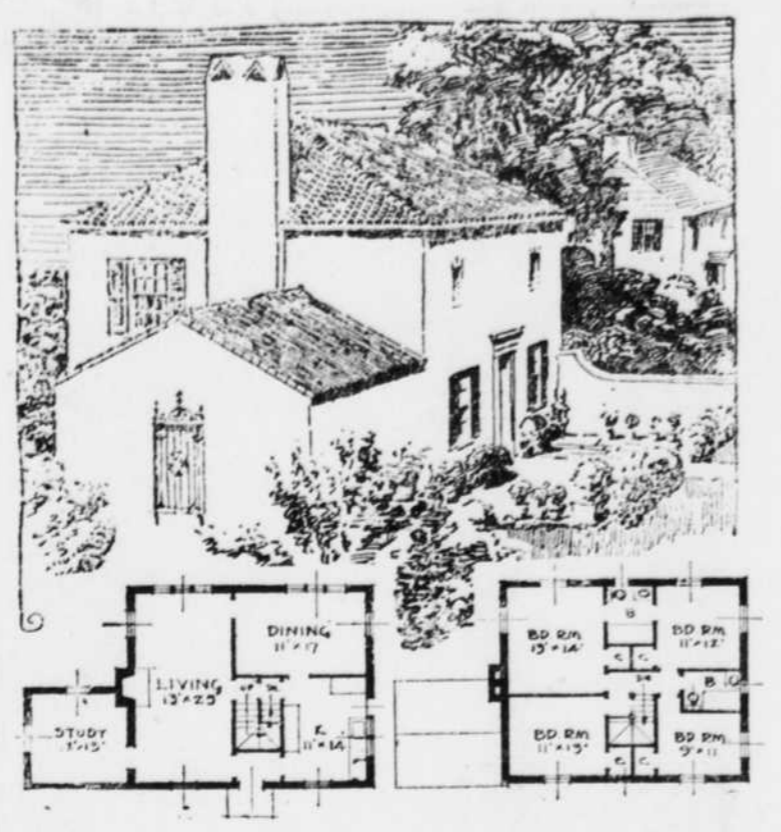

Leicester Wagner, a United Press writer, was rather startled recently when he passed the Filmmare theater in Hollywood and saw in electric lights: "The Artists' Sons—a comedy starring the two sons of Rob Wagner, the author."

Investigation revealed that someone had unearthed a picture filmed in 1911, in which Leicester and his brother, Thornton, now a St. Louis aviator, had the featured roles.

The production drew a large newspaper representation to the Filmmare and proved to be a startling revelation of what women wore and young boys looked like 20 years ago.

"That film must not be circulated nationally if I have to petition Will Hayes in person," was Wagner's only comment.

SIMPLICITY GIVES CHARM TO A HOUSE OF SPANISH TYPE

In the exterior treatment of this Spanish type house there is an appealing simplicity, which, happily, contributes to economy.

Yet, though it may be simple in contrast to, say, the English design, one could scarcely call such a house as this plain.

There is interest, for example, in the contrast between the stucco walls and the roof of red Spanish tile with which a few oranges and lemons have been intermingled. Then, when the shadows of the overhanging cornice and the nearby trees fall on the soft-toned walls it appears that the designer has achieved beauty without too obvious effort.

The chimney adds its distinctive touch, and if the flower pots placed on the terrace in front of the house echo the color of the roof, the effect justifies the slight extra cost.

The extra expense of the iron-work over the window in the wing is warranted by the effect achieved. In the view shown the front wall of the wing is unbroken and therefore the window at the end draws more interest and should be effectively handled.

The rooms are grouped conveniently, the stair arrangement being unusual. It is possible by this plan to go to the second floor without being seen by arriving guests.

The stairs lead to the central hall accessible to the four bedrooms and to one of their two baths. Three of the upstairs rooms have ventilation from two sides and the fourth could easily have, should the wing be omitted from the plan.

Downstairs the large living room with its large fireplace and connecting study leaves little to be desired. If the wing is not built, another window may replace the study door. The convenience of the kitchen location with respect to hall, dining room and stairs is obvious.

The cost of construction will likely range from $8,000 to $10,000, depending on local conditions. A lot 75 by 100 feet is required.

AUTHOR FORMS NEW PARTY IN SOUTH

MONTE NE AIR, April 24. (UP)—A white-haired, medium-statured man whose writings a quarter century ago brought him national prominence, may be found busy at work here on the platform and creeds for a new political party he and others are launching.

The party's leader is William H. (Coin) Harvey, lawyer, economist and writer, whose treatises on finances were made a prominent part of the campaign of the late William Jennings Bryan.

Harvey, who was reported dangerously ill several times this last winter and whose energy has been drained by an arduous career, is chairman of the national committee of the "New Political Party," a task to which he is devoting much time and study.

First Convention
 Representatives of almost every state in the union are joining with Harvey in preparation for the party's first national convention to be held early this fall. The convention will be in a middle western town.

Leaders of the new party know that major political parties have neglected to see the practice of usury as permitted by national and state laws.

"Applicants to the party must qualify themselves by stating they are well informed as to the effect of a financial system which permits usury, a practice which party leaders assert is permitted by statutes which the two major parties have fostered and pushed through congress."

Harvey, the focal point of the new party, is a dramatic figure whose writings early fell into the category of "best sellers." It has been reported that millions of copies of "Coin Financial School" published in 1924, "Table of Two Cities" and other volumes published at the same time, were sold and their author was widely known as an exponent of free silver.

Widely Quoted
 Coin's writings were widely quoted by Bryan in his campaigns that carried him through the western silver-bearing states.

Harvey is confident that many hundreds will attend the party's convention and is working through quickly organized state committees to swell the membership before the national election. The party, he said, will avoid controversial issues involving the prohibition question, tariff relief measures, tariff and similar issues over which each of the two major parties clash.

It is the intention of the party of the progressive group which met recently in Washington and which had the support and leadership of Senators Norris of Nebraska and

CITES CRUELTY IN HER DIVORCE SUIT

Eleanor Fox yesterday filed suit against Gordon F. Fox asking for divorce. The couple were married in Jamestown, R. I., in August, 1922. She charges extreme cruelty in her complaint and asks that the defendant, who is alleged to earn $300 a month, pay $110 a month for the support of herself and two minor children, Mary Catherine Fox, 8, and Jane Page Fox, 5. Mrs. Fox is represented by A. L. Scott.

STATE IS WARNED FOR THRIFT LACK

LOS ANGELES, April 24. (UP)—California is the most enterprising, yet least thrifty, of all people in America, according to A. C. Robinson, president of the savings banks division of the American Bankers' Association and head of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, who visited here recently.

"What Californians have accomplished in transforming their state—especially this southern section—from a semi-desert, into a glorious garden in the marvel of the country," Robinson said, "yet they have done less to provide for a rainy day than any state group I know."

"New England continues to be the 'thrift belt' of the country, he added.

Are Older Women Failing in Jobs? Survey To Determine If So and Why

WASHINGTON, April 22. (UP)—Are per, young business girls edging older women out of good jobs? And if so is the inability of the older women to adopt modern business methods responsible for their losing out?

A nation-wide survey of business women past 40, conducted by Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, efficiency engineer, will attempt to find out.

As head of the women's division of the President's emergency committee on unemployment Dr. Gilbreth in recent months has noted many instances where older women have been forced to yield their places to younger women. She wants to know the reason.

The survey will be under the direction of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs and of Bryn Mawr college.

Questionnaires will be sent the 1-300 clubs of the federation. Trained interviewers from Bryn Mawr will talk with hundreds of women over 40 seeking information as to factors which have contributed to their success or failure.

The chief object of the survey is to ascertain if discrimination against the older woman worker actually exists among employers and, if so, what are the underlying causes.

Should investigation show that the older woman really has difficulty in competing with the young newcomer in business the federation will attempt to find a remedy for the situation.

Dr. Gilbreth, a quiet, calm woman, is the mother of eleven children. She has so organized her own home through efficiency engineering methods that she can be away for weeks at a time and leave a smooth-running household. Each child and grown son daughter has a special task to do in the home.

POLICE GUARD D. A. R. PARLEY

WASHINGTON, April 24. (UP)—Daughters of the American Revolution called for special police protection today after adopting resolutions denouncing communism.

Officers were stationed at every door of the meeting hall here with instructions to allow no one to enter except on business and plainclothes men were scattered through the audience.

Mrs. William Sherman Walker, chairman of the national defense committee, said regarding the special protection that "we always have it when anything like this comes up. Communist groups are so likely to come to our meetings with literature to distribute."

Officers said convention officials had mentioned receiving a threatening letter, presumably from radicals.

YOUTH SUES HIS MOTHER IN EAST

QUINCY, Ill., April 24. (UP)—Just how far a parent may go in restricting the liberty of a minor child will be decided in a suit just filed in the Adams county circuit court. Quentin, 16-year-old son of Mrs. Nellie O. Babcock, is the plaintiff and his mother and two neighbors, John E. McHardy and Robert Zimmerman, have been made defendants in a suit for $15,000 damages. The youth charges that he was placed in confinement at his home by his mother with the aid of the two other defendants, and prevented from reaching his place of employment. He asserts that he took the side of his absent father, Bolo Babcock, who left his wife and is now residing in Chicago.
