

SALT SELLING AT FALLON STARTS

The Fallon Eagle says that the packing of Silver State table salt for the trade was commenced at the Salco plant of the Nevada Pure Salt Company, 25 miles east of Fallon, last week, it was reported in Fallon by company officials.

With this activity started and the block salt press in operation an increase of five men has been necessary in the working force at the plant, which now numbers 20 men, it was said. Enough orders are already on hand for filling for a week's steady run, it was reported, without any solicitation of the trade.

With containers for the various grades of salt now on hand, a sales campaign is contemplated by the company, whose officers anticipate a brisk business.

Control of the company was recently purchased by B. M. Thompson, for many years a Louisiana salt field operator, who experienced in the business. Much of the equipment of Mr. Thompson's Louisiana plant was subsequently removed to the Salco plant, where it was installed.

Southeast sales for the company will be handled by C. A. McPhee, a Louisiana man of 20 years experience in the salt business, was in Fallon last week for a conference with Mr. Thompson.

GUIDING YOUR CHILD

THE DREAMER
By MRS. AGNES LYNE

The child who walks about with his head in the clouds and his feet uncertainly treading the earth is a familiar problem. Parents, depending on their own temperamental bias, regard such a child as gifted, charming, and superior, or as a potential ne'er-do-well who somehow or other must be brought to time before it is too late.

Certainly, for the sake of his own happiness, every child must develop a certain amount of conformity to external demands.

The dreaming child cannot be made more realistic by punishment or nagging, for to these he responds by retiring further into the world of his own imaginings.

Only sympathetically can he be won over to an interest in real things and real happenings. The important thing is to make the real world so attractive and interesting that it competes with his fantasies. He needs play material to stimulate him to physical activity, congenial playmates to lead him into simple, wholesome occupations.

Love, cheerfulness, good sense and understanding make the real world such a pleasant place to live in that there is little need of incentive for escape into fantasy.

Whatever interests such a child may have should be carefully encouraged.

A boy who spent all his time reading and scribbling verses was first led to develop some realistic interests through his love of nature.

It was his habit to wander through fields and woods with eyes and ears wide open for the beauties of the countryside.

His father recognized his interest and gave it a new turn by providing him with nature books and collecting materials which aroused him to a more objective and realistic kind of response to his surroundings.

SCREEN LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD

By HUBBARD KEAVY
HOLLYWOOD—The film chorus girl is no more. Two years ago Hollywood had from 800 to 1,000 dancing daughters working regularly in musical pictures.

In the song and dance era each studio had its group of chorus girls under contract. Some studios had only a handful; the larger ones had nearly 100.

Dancing school were speeding up instruction to turn new crops, and all trains from the east deposited their cargoes of twinkling toes and high hopes.

During those synecopated days the future of the chorus girl seemed bright and happy. But her sun has set as rapidly as it rose, and today she is a member of a phantom army.

A thousand girls is a lot of femininity, even in overcrowded Hollywood. What has become of them? Forty per cent are still in pictures, playing extra or bit roles and occasionally dancing. Harold Dodds, a casting director, told me.

Between 20 and 30 per cent have gone back to New York and the eastern stage shows. The rest, he believes, have married or taken jobs outside the profession, or joined western stage show units.

BACK TO HIGH SCHOOL
We could only think of one out of all these hundreds, who really got a big break. She was Eleanor Hunt, who was taken from the ranks and given the lead in "Whoopie" opposite Eddie Cantor.

That, however, was the only film of importance she was in. Since her marriage to Rex Lease, cowboy actor, a few months ago, Miss Hunt has been completely out of pictures.

One former chorus girl added a new angle.

"Three of our group have gone back to high school," she said, "and two more have entered college. We were all pretty young and a lot of the bunch didn't intend to stay in pictures. They just danced for the thrill of it and the experience."

THE NEW FILMUSICAL
Filmusicals may return, but they will be different in form from those of two years ago.

They will not be copies of stage presentations. Instead they will be entirely new, with a minimum of singing and dancing, told snappily.

There is room, or there will be when and if musicals return, for the comic opera. There is spirited music in them that should appeal to everyone.
