ASSUMING POWER

WHETHER LEGAL or not, there appears to be no reason of sufficient importance to justify the attempt which the city of Las Vegas has made to impose the power of its police upon those districts adjoining the city, but not included within the corporate limits of Las Vegas.

Attorneys do not all agree as to the legality of the measure under which the city assumes jurisdiction through its police force and its municipal court, over the possession and sale of intoxicating liquors outside the city. However, assuming for the moment that the ordinance is a valid one and would be upheld by the higher courts, we may still have some misgivings as to its wisdom.

We saw the other day something like fifty reputable, self-respecting citizens of the outlying territory, protesting to the city board against "regulation without representation." We heard numerous tales of injustice, some of which, at least, we are compelled to believe.

But, assuming again, that the arrests the police have made for violations of the liquor law outside the city were justified by the evidence they were able to produce, we still have grave doubts as to the propriety of the city in so imposing its authority.

We were told in no uncertain terms a short time ago when we assumed to protest because the fire department refused to respond to a call to save property outside the city, that those fellows settled outside the city to avoid the city regulations and that the city was under no obligation to assist them in time of disaster. Although The Age still does not agree with that conclusion, we admit that legally it is probably correct.

Nevertheless, while so solicitous about keeping strictly within the limits of the city with our property saving equipment, we immediately thereafter deliberately extend our policing powers over those same people whom we refused to aid.

We have been accustomed to seek the "consent of the governed" in imposing our laws. We have senators and congressmen and members of the legislature and city and county commissioners in whose election we have a voice.

But in the case under consideration, we attempt to impose the power of our police and our municipal court upon people who have no voice whatever in the election of our city officials. In principle it would be just as reasonable to expect the state of Nevada to tamely submit to the extension of the laws of the state of Arizona over Clark county, Nevada. We had just as much voice in the election of the Arizona state administration as those people living outside the city limits of Las Vegas had in the election of our city commissioners.

Again, it appears unnecessary for the city to attempt to govern people who do not live here and who do not choose to subject themselves to our city government. That has been one of the arguments in favor of the ordinance we are discussing—that these people bought property outside the city to escape the building regulations and other conditions imposed by the city.

But, if people choose to live outside our city instead of inside, are they not entirely

What with two honest-to-Gawd Rolls-Royces wheeling snarkishly about our village... we have taken our poor little Ford home and tucked it in the garage out of sight. Tsk - Tsk - Tsk... how metropolitan.

First thing you know, some ex-brakeman will bust out with a Jap chauffeur or something.

Only think we haven't now to make us a real honest-to-goodness city is a subway and a few nigger nurse maids in the park (if we had a park).

SEES HOPE FOR R. R. SITUATION

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 16. (U.P.)—The railroad situation isn't nearly as bad as it is painted, General William W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania system, said today, when he arrived in New Orleans for a brief visit.

"The situation is shining for the railroads," he said. He discussed a project of the Pennsylvania for electrification of the lines between New York and Washington to provide the world's fastest service. He said the electrification would cost $100,000,000.

A new Brazilian order prohibits any except Brazilian pilots to operate planes registered by the government and operating in the country.

within their rights? And why should we assume to tell them what they must or must not do. Why take upon the police force of the city those duties which the sheriff of the county and his deputies are amply able to perform and for which we are paying them?

And, again, the question suggests itself to our mind, will not the Las Vegas police have plenty to engage their attention if they confine their activities within the city?

ILL FATED BOULDER COUPLE BURIED IN VICTORVILLE, CAL.

Ralph Villen, 35, and his niece, Mrs. Marion Benelli, 32, both residents of Boulder City who were killed Saturday, Dec. 2 in an automobile accident near Victorville, were buried in that city last Wednesday. It was stated by friends and relatives here Saturday.

The accident occurred when Villen, who was driving his car along the highway at a good speed, collided head-on with a five-ton truck coming from the opposite direction. The Villen car was demolished and the unfortunate couple killed.

Benelli, who is employed by the Six Companies at the tunnels, received a telegram late the same day, telling of the accident. He left his six-year-old daughter Gloria with neighbors and accompanied by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Nelson, rushed to the scene of the accident. He found the bodies mangled beyond recognition.

The couple was well known in Las Vegas. Villen was at one time employed by a dry cleaning establishment in Las Vegas. The Benellis at one time operated a rooming and boarding house on Fifth street, opposite the school house.

SAILOR TOM'S GYM IS MESS HALL KITCHEN

Training doesn't mean much to Sailor Tom Blood, pride of the Boulder City mess hall. Blood, who kayaked Joey Ray in the third round of their fight on Frank Moran's first card Thursday night, is a cook (and a good one, says his chef, Chef Bob Davenport). The big rub is that the sailor only works a mere 14 hours a day and his fans don't see how he makes the grade. One of 'em suggests that the business end of a wooden spoon, or a hefty potato masher is a whole lot better than a punching bag or a skipping rope.

SCREEN LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD—The whereabouts and present occupations of former glittering lights of the cinema is a subject that ever intrigues me. Inquiry and investigation over a long period have been rather fruitful. Here's what has happened to some: Ella Hall works in an exclusive women's store in Hollywood. Grace Curd is playing small roles. Marguerite Clark is happily married to Harry P. Williams, one of the wealthiest men in Louisiana.

CLARA K. YOUNG

Rosemary Theby is the wife of Harry Myers, film comedian, and is a familiar figure in Hollywood social circles. Jane Novak was last heard of appearing in pictures in Australia.

ECHOED FAME

Maurice Costello recently returned to memory through the prominence attained by his two daughters. He lives in Hollywood but it is long since he has been on the screen. Vaudeville claimed Charles Ray. Clara Kimball Young, after several years in vaudeville, came back to Hollywood to play minor roles. George Walsh is assisting his brother, Raoul, the director. Enid Bennett, after semi-retirement, was seen recently in "Skippy" and "Sooky". Betty Blythe has been living in Europe and recently made a picture there. J. Warren Kerrigan is retired and lives here. Francis X. Bushman is playing in stock companies in the midwest and east. King Baggot occasionally plays small movie parts. Seena Owen is still in Hollywood. She was last seen in a talkie two years ago. Olga Petrova occasionally appears on the stage. Both Nazimova and Alice Brady are scaring in a play in New York. Mary Miles Minter, who gave up films in a flood of unfavorable publicity, has been living in Europe. May Allison is married to James Quirk, magazine publisher, and lives in New York.

WHEN STARS DIM
Marjorie Daw was seen last in a Tom Mix picture three or four years ago. Wanda Hawley lives here and occasionally is seen in independent films. May McAvoy and Florence Vidor, bright stars before the talkies, are domesticated and living in Hollywood. Olive Borden married a Paterson, N. J. lawyer. Helen Holmes is married to a Sohora, Cal. rancher. Pearl White is reported living in Paris. Crane Wilbur is on the stage. Ruth Stonehouse lives here quietly with her husband, Felix Hughes. Phyllis Haver is happily married and refuses all film offers.

In less than two months of operation the legal aid clinic of Duke university law school handled 45 cases for persons unable to pay a lawyer's fee.
