RECONSTRUCTION

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S Reconstruction program is now beginning to have its effect on the economic condition of the country.

After a considerable period of wavering uncertainly the slight upward trend of business seems to have established itself as a reasonable permanent condition.

Now, we are told by the newspaper observers at Washington, the recovery has become rather stabilized. Each rising flurry is met by an onset of pessimism, to be sure, but each retreat is stopped at a point a little higher than the preceding low.

The coming week is looked forward to with intense interest by the business world. The President's reconstruction finance corporation having been approved by congress, will just be getting into working order and within a few days should be exerting its stimulating effect on business.

Those who are indulging in a little prophecy predict that the coming week or two will see the first substantial progress toward financial recovery in the business of the country. It is said that the very fact of the existence of this great corporation with its hundreds of millions of capital ready to go to the aid of the banks of the country when necessary will so far relieve the public mind that but comparatively little aid will be necessary.

We are getting right back to what we have all said many times during the past two years—that the main trouble is in the state of mind of the people. When the majority of the populace have confidence, they act accordingly and thereby business is good.

A QUESTION OF PROPRIETY

IT IS NOT so much a question of legality as of propriety which we should consider when dealing with the protests being made by those who resent the extension of city jurisdiction over territory outside the city limits.

The power of the city to impose its regulations on people who have no voice in the city government may have plenty of legal authority. The legislature may, although this point is the subject of conflicting opinions among attorneys, have power to extend the authority of the city charter over people outside the city. Yet the question arises among us common folks; if we can bring people from outside of the city into our municipal courts and fine them for offenses committed outside the city, why cannot we go a step further and levy taxes on the property of those people and sell their homes located outside the city for non-payment of city taxes?

Leaving aside all those legal quibbles, it does seem unwise and unnecessary for us in Las Vegas to attempt to govern those outside. We can see nothing but trouble and discontent to arise from such a policy, whatever its legal standing.

FILIPINO BAN IS PROTESTED

MANILA, P. I., Jan. 23. (UP)—The insular bureau of labor, in response to petitions from Filipino workers in the United States, especially from those along the Pacific coast states, has started an island-wide campaign intended to curtail labor migration from the Philippines to America.

In this drive, the first organized attempt to stop labor movement away from the islands, the bureau sought the aid of all municipal and provincial officials of the government, and gave them instructions to discourage all prospective Filipino immigrants from leaving their homeland in search of work in the United States.

VEGAS

VAGARIES

IN THE SPRING
Come all you lads and lassies, Let's hoist a keg of beer; The winter's gone forever; Break out the summer cheer. —Abdul Abdomen.

From what they tell us, a lad in one of these new Buicks, parked out under this swell full moon we're having, doesn't need anything even approaching "wizard control."

Another tragedy this morning affecting the younger generation is the closing of Sunday school. Sure is tough!

DONE IN OILS

Intimate photo of little-known industries. Hauling lumber with which to put a stick in some punch. The splinters are saved to make wood alcohol and the knots for shoelaces.

CINDERELLA

The modern miss tells her God-mother to go take a powder, gallops downtown, tries on the Lasky slipper for $2.98, and buys a trip to Havana with her savings. —advt (?)

PONY SNICKERS
Vegas Verdeans cracking wise about drying up Las Vegas' model suburb, as if the village isn't so dry now you can't grow grass.

Dear Cavern:
Undoubtedly our future is brightened. We never knew before, and hesitate to say it now—but we've discovered that Walter Winchell, our ideal columnist, not only talks through his nose but has a New York accent—the sissy. —archie.

AGONIZED LAMENT
Oh weep and wail as we now tell the saddest fate of earny snell; for earny walking in his sleep crossed the highway . . . beep, beep! —Achmet Bey Windo.

SCREEN LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD—Sari Maritza is not another Clara Bow, but she certainly resembles the Clara of five years ago—before Clara's face got round.

SARI MARITZA

Hollywood's newest foreign import is a girl named Sari Maritza—a more sophisticated, a more grown-up type than the hoydenish Clara. She is representative of the modern athletic girl, somewhat American in appearance despite her parentage and continental rearing. Sari was in pictures only two years, in England and Berlin, having quickly jumped from "bits" to star roles through the admittance of her youthful manager, Vivian Gaye, a former actress, who discovered Sari. They met in a German studio and Miss Gaye, who is 23—two years older than Sari—was impressed and immediately conceived the idea of "putting her over."

AND SHE DID

When Miss Gaye took Sari to England, a movie director decided she was just the type he wanted and so Sari got her real start. Sari has a slight English accent.

OPERATION MAY SAVE BRAIN OF 13-MONTH BABE

NEW YORK, Jan. 23. (UP)—Surgeons at the Neurological hospital were non-committal today on reports that they are preparing to operate on a 13-month-old baby girl, whose brain reportedly cannot develop properly unless surgical aid is given.

The child is Diane Moore, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Moore. The baby's mother has urged doctors to perform the operation, rather than let Diane live as a mental defective.

Mrs. Moore, though agonized at the prospect of the operation, expressed willingness for it tonight. "Even though there is only one chance in a thousand," she said, "I am willing to have the operation performed. Whatever happens, Diane cannot lose."

Humming birds are attracted by colors but not by odors, experiments conducted by Robert S. Woods of Azusa, Calif., tended to show.
