WHOLE UNIVERSE IN 4 MINUTES

This $750,000 planetarium to be completed in Los Angeles this summer will give spectators an accurate picture of star and planet movements, compressing a year's movements in the space of four minutes.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10. (U.P.)—The heavens as they appeared 50,000 years ago, as they appear today, or as they will appear 50,000 years hence, will be seen by southern Californians with completion this summer of a $750,000 planetarium to be erected here.

The institution, the third of its kind in the United States, will be started some time in April, the Security First National bank of Los Angeles, its sponsors, announced.

Construction and maintenance of the planetarium was provided in the will of the late Col. Griffith J. Griffith, pioneer Los Angeles developer. The building will be located on the sides of Mount Hollywood in a spacious park Griffith gave the city.

The instrument with which visitors may view the heavens will weigh two tons when completed. It is composed of 119 synchronized projectors. There are 90 lenses in the apparatus and each lens will project a portion of the heavens upon the ceiling of the building's dome.

By this means the entire celestial shoot before permitting armed Chinese to enter.

Fifteen Japanese shells fell within 50 yards of this sector yesterday. Nine of them exploded. The United States troops will relieve the American, Portuguese and Russian detachments of the settlement volunteer corps by arrangements with the settlement authorities.

WASHINGTON ALARMED
WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. (U.P.)—News of Chinese communist activities came out of China today in consular messages which reported an American bishop's appeal for aid at Kanchow, and told of "Red" activities at Shanghai.

The bishop's appeal for aid against a threat of a Communist army operating in Kiangsi province had been broadcast in United Press dispatches yesterday, and the State department learned that Consul Walter A. Adams at Hankow had requested Chinese aid to protect the bishop and any other Americans.

The messages, starting in their import, added to State department anxieties, though Adams indicated that peril at Kanchow perhaps was not as imminent as the bishop's appeals indicated. Meantime, word came that Communists were actively taking advantage of the disturbed Shanghai situation by spreading propaganda.

NEW GROUP TO AID TOURIST TRAFFIC

A complete account of the organization in Salt Lake of the intermountain development association, at which Las Vegas and Clark county was represented by a delegation from the chamber of commerce, is published herewith.

The membership will comprise civic organizations, highway associations and other groups interested in the tourist traffic.

Vail M. Pittman, publisher of the Ely, Nev., Times, and a brother of Senator Key Pittman, was elected president by acclamation. He also is president of the White Pine chamber of commerce and president of Allied Counties of Nevada, says the Salt Lake Tribune.

Vice presidents are: George Goehs, president, Cheyenne chamber of commerce; J. H. Down, president, Las Vegas chamber, and J. Francis Fowles, president, Ogden chamber. Gus P. Backman, general secretary of the Salt Lake chamber, was named secretary-treasurer.

Members of the executive board were elected to represent the four states, as follows: Utah—Ellis J. Pickett, St. George, president, Civic Clubs of Southern Utah; M. R. Hovey, secretary, Logan chamber of commerce, and Clayton Jenkins, secretary, Provo chamber.

Nevada—R. W. Lemaire, Battle Mountain secretary, Victory Highway association; Mr. Pittman and A. R. Thompson, a director of the Las Vegas chamber.

Wyoming—E. B. Hitchcock, president, Rock Springs Lions club; D. O. Harvey, Evanston Lions club, and Carl G. Youngberg, Lyman chamber of commerce.

M. E. Rowley, manager of the Denver tourist and convention bureau, was named to head the Colorado representation, and will select the other two representatives from that state.

Speakers at the meeting stressed the point that the interests of the four states are mutual as far as the tourist business is concerned. They pointed out that the opportunity of attracting tourists this summer will be greater than for many years, due to the fact that a number of large conventions will be held this year on the Pacific coast.

Among them are the Olympic games, American Legion convention and annual meeting of the United States chamber of commerce.

A resolution was adopted opposing any congressional curtailment of appropriations for highways, either under the "7 per cent" system, Colton-Oddie bill or for forest development or forest reserves and trails.

A resolution, which embodies some of the specific objects of the work, was adopted after the work of the morning and afternoon business sessions at the chamber of commerce had been coordinated. Through the office of the secretary-treasurer the following will be carried out:

Interchange of lists weekly of inquiries received by the various communities through chambers of commerce, tourist bureaus, hotels and other agencies.

Cooperative advertising on highway bulletins of various community events.

Cooperation of all the communities represented by displaying for each other appropriate advertising material, calling attention of the tourist to various community events and scenic attractions; cooperation in distribution of literature of all kinds.

Encouragement of local efforts to better acquaint the communities with their climatic, industrial and scenic advantages.

An endeavor on the part of each community to sponsor some outstanding community advertising feature which, in turn, will be promoted by all members of the association.

Resolutions also were adopted asking for greater accuracy on road maps, and that every effort be made to bring about maintenance of the airmail service as it affects the intermountain and Rocky mountain territory.

T. L. Holman, chairman of the Salt Lake chamber's advertising committee, was toastmaster of the night meeting.

Short talks were given by Secretary of State Milton H. Wellings, Mayor Louis Marcus, B. F. Quinn, chairman of the county commission; Howard A. Jarvis, president of the Utah State Press association; Mr. Backman, Mr. Down, Mr. Pittman and Fred E. Hamlin of the advertising committee of the Salt Lake chamber.

Mr. Holman reminded the group that the section represented possesses not only some of the country's outstanding scenic attractions, but also a great treasure house of natural resources as a basis for industrial development.

SCREEN LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD—Writing for the movies is nothing more than a vacation to Gene Fowler.

He's a newspaperman who quit the business because he couldn't be a reporter; publishers insisted on making an editor of him; he didn't like that, so he went into the novel writing business.

Fowler came here to write a story for John Barrymore and he likes Hollywood so well he thinks he'll stay out his six months contract.

So he rented a house, but not the kind of a house authors usually acquire on their initial venture in Hollywood.

It's a small place, at the end of a long canyon, and no in the most fashionable part of town.

ON WHEELS AT LEAST
Nor did Fowler make the down payment on 16 cylinders. He bought a bicycle instead, and pedals it to and from work twice a day.

He said the other day that he'd finally bought a car, a huge foreign job.

"But it didn't cost me much," he said, and I thought he was going to apologize for being extravagant. "It was $35, tires and all. Even though it is a 1918 model, it runs pretty well yet."

The only decoration in Fowler's studio office is a head of cabbage. "The cabbage goes to the one who gets an idea. I won it three days ago for suggesting we get a new head; one less decayed than this."

Besides collecting checks, Fowler is getting material for a novel about Hollywood, and if he carries out the idea he has in mind, a few dozen Hollywoodians will be cursing Mr. Fowler.

FINE FEATHERS?
Sylvia Sidney's penchant for comfort in dress caused her to be reprimanded the other day.

She was told by someone in authority at her studio that she ought to dress like an "important actress." Low-heeled shoes, polo coats and berets aren't at all becoming, she was reminded.

Sylvia was told to buy some clothes—lots of them.

Which she dutifully did. But she's still wondering if clothes make the actress.
