

REALLY LIVING

Las Vegas offers all the requirements for real, vital, joyous living. In climate, we enjoy the charm which only the desert country can afford-winters clear and bright as a spring morning; summers dry and fiercely hot with nights so cool and pleasant that they come down upon us after sunset like a benediction. Mountains, plains and valleys-a limitless expanse of ever-changing beauty and interest.

And human companionship of a quality rarely found among the people of crowded cities-friendly spirits, loyal souls with whom it is a happiness to be.

And places where we can dine and dance and listen to fine music and bring back the gayeties of our youth in pleasant recreation.

And then the indispensible means of livelihood, work going on, business developing, property increasing in value.

: And a splendid future for our region assured through the development of natural resources. True enough, we admit, that we also have some troubles and disappointments and postponed aspirations. Where do they not?

. But on the whole, we know of no place we would rather live than right here in Las Vegas. And we neither need nor desire the sympathy or pity of city people, for we have everything they have—and a whole lot more-to make life worth the living.

RADIUM DANGER

We read that Eben M. Byers died because of his constant use of radium charged waters. Radium poisoning, the verdict was. His bones wasted and his teeth dropped out.

Now medical scientists are endeavoring to save others from a similar, unwitting fate. Even our jolly friend Jimmy Walker of New York is said to be drinking radium charged waters.

Any water might be dangerous to Jimmy. We would hate to see his teeth falling out and his bones shriveling. So we hope the medic will be able to keep us all in shape by sending out a warning on dangers of drinking water, especially radium water.

Last Monday afternoon she was in the home of a mutual friend and had been introduced to Hayes, who offered to take her home when she was ready to leave. She accepted and the party leit. After driving a few blocks she told Hayes that he was going in the wrong direction and he replied that she did not know "where in the hell" they were going, according to her report to Keate.

GOOD ADVICE

President Hoover advises everybody to buy an automobile-if they need one and have the price. It is his belief, concurred in by the whole automobile industry, that such a course would restore normality to the country.

It might be too blamed normalif the Fords and General Motors got all the money and the rest of us had nothing left with which to buy a gallon or two of gas.

Nevertheless, the President has the right idea. It is the busy dollar which makes payrolls and gives people something with which to buy grub, and automobiles and gas-Which are the three essentials of life in this era. Clothes are just an unimportant incident since Easter is past.

GAS TAX

To ask us to buy a car and ther almost in the same breath soak us a cent a gallon tax on the gasoline to run it is surely good business for Uncle Sam. Hoover certainl knows how to wipe out the deficit.

More than thirty traffic violators were arrested in one night last week by Traffic Officer Jimmy Foxley who is now patrolling the Boulder City highway both day and night. Most of the violations were minor ones, defective head and tail lights comprising the majority of arrests. Although Foxley has not been spe cifically ordered to patrol this section of highway, he has been cooperating with H. S. Deadrich, state traffic officer. His patrol extends from the city limits to the Red Mill cabaret.

DRIVE ON DESERT

They drove into the rough desert country about eight miles from Searchlight and when the woman resented the advances of Schultz, he assertedly struck her a terrific blow on the back of the head. The men then dragged her from the car and assaulted and robbed ner of $15.

Before starting to return Searchlight, the victim was told that she would be killed if she "squealed" on the men. On the return trip the car of the attackers developed engine trouble and they were forced to hail a passing machine, driven by an acquaintance.
