LEGION SEEKS NEW MEMBERS

Members of the local post of the American Legion have embarked on their annual drive for new members. They are anxious to eclipse their 1931 quota, when 220 new men were enrolled.

A large number of Legion members from Boulder City attended the regular meeting of the post, held Tuesday evening. The Dam city membership now stands at 313 and the Boulderites are striving to surpass the record set by the Reno post, which chalked up 550 new members in 1931.

Large delegations from both the Las Vegas and Boulder City posts are expected to attend the Legion district convention, to be held in Ely on May 6, 7, 8. Those attending plan to leave Las Vegas in one large party, on the morning of the sixth. It is hoped that when the state convention convenes in June, the two posts will have a total of more than 850 members.

PROHIBITION CABINET TOPIC

WASHINGTON, April 20. (U.P.)—President Hoover's cabinet is discussing plans for a prohibition referendum despite the pressure that dry forces are exerting on the chief executive.

Even some of the driest cabinet members are convinced that the Republican party must face this issue. One has formulated a plan which may become the basis of the official administration plank, at the Republican national convention in Chicago.

KINDLINESS OF VON HINDENBURG FOIL TO STERNER MOLD SHAPING CENTRAL CHARACTER IN GERMAN POLITICAL DRAMA

President Paul von Hindenburg, whose rise to German leadership has its origin in his fame as a soldier, is a man of peace and kindness as well. Above, he is greeting German veterans of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71; below, at a social event with women as his interested audience.

BERLIN, April 20. (U.P.)—"Pflicht," that good old German word for "duty" with Paul von Hindenburg as its exponent—is the motif of the Wagnerian-like drama being enacted these days in German politics.

Its first act was worked out amid crashing dissonances of conflict: between the ultra-nationalistic themes of Adolf Hitler and the middle ground tenets of republicanism expounded by the cohorts of Chancellor Heinrich Brüning.

Now, after the Easter intermezzo, the second act is approaching its curtain, due to descend upon announcement of the result of the second presidential ballot April 10.

Hindenburg is the central character of the presentation, a big, sturdy figure bearing the weight of 84 years without visible weariness. His old-fashioned "pompadour" stands stiffly at attention atop a massive head. Square shoulders and bulky torso and thick legs add to the evidence of a life-long observance of military carriage.

Under the shaggy brows, which can beetle sternly or lift benignly, are calm eyes with glints of the humor and kindness of the inner man.

A fine old gentleman is this world personage. He is meticulous in his gallantry to women, sympathetic and winning with children, courteous even with men, considerate of inferiors in rank.

Years ago, when he was a garrison division commander in the imperial army, he sought to test the efficiency of the training of recruits by halting a new soldier and asking: "Do you know who I am?"

The reply gave his rank correctly, and Hindenburg put another question: "How did you recognize me as the general?"

"By your big nose," was the startlingly frank reply, and it is eloquent of the man's character that he told the joke on himself in a day when minute details of discipline were the ne plus ultra of German militarism.

Detailed routine has become second nature to him, and on it he insists. But it has kept him ever cool and collected, dispassionate and steady.

WHISTLES WHEN NERVOUS

It is related that a few years ago a social company chatted about what various persons did when nervous or upset.

"Do you know what I do?" asked the venerable president. "Whenever I get nervous I whistle."

"But," objected one of his intimates, "I never heard you whistle."

"I never do," said Hindenburg. His dominant note is "duty" and it shows in both his private and public acts. He was 77 years old when he was first drafted to run for the presidency, and he undertook the job because of arguments that it was his duty to do so.

'DUTY' PLEA WON CONSENT

The plea that won him in 1925 was repeated this year when talk of a second term crystallized. In his only campaign speech President Hindenburg, explaining that there was danger that an extremist of either the right or left might be chosen, said:

"Duty commanded me to prevent this. I was fully aware that my resolve would be misunderstood. But I would rather suffer misjudgment than to see our people dragged before my eyes in fresh internal strife. To save Germany from that fate I am willing to continue in office if re-elected."

RECALLS 'COMMON SACRIFICE'

Recalling the World war days when "the whole people—workers, peasants and all—did their duty in common sacrifice," he pleaded for national unity and wound up:

"To give my last remaining strength for this purpose I offer myself again. That is the meaning and aim of my candidacy."

MOONEY FATE KNOWN TODAY

SACRAMENTO, Calif., April 20. (U.P.)—Tom Mooney will know tomorrow whether he will receive a pardon after serving 16 years for a crime many believe he did not commit.

Sometime between noon and 4 p. m. Thursday, Governor James Rolph, reiterated today, he will announce his decision in Mooney's case. The announcement will be accompanied by a voluminous report compiled by Judge Matt I. Sullivan, the governor's legal adviser.

Mooney, who appears gentle and aged now, declared from his San Quentin cell that he did not expect to be given his freedom.

BROKERS MUST BE AT PROBE

WASHINGTON, April 20. (U.P.)—Wall street stock brokers believed to handle the accounts of the biggest "bear" traders on the New York exchange will be asked to disclose their deals to the senate banking and currency committee tomorrow.

Subpoenas were issued today for 20 brokerage firms, including some of the biggest in Wall street and believed to number among their customers men on whose "short selling" operations President Hoover blames much of the decline in stock prices.

POOR LIQUOR CURTAILS LIFE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 20. (U.P.)—"Bad liquor" of the prohibition era may take ten years off the life of modern youth, a group of doctors in a heart clinic agreed today.

"Bad liquor, over-consumption and the jazz age have resulted in a severe strain on the human heart," one doctor said. "The result may strike ten years from the life of this generation."

"Many deaths attributed to heart disease are due to the strain of today's 'bootleg life.'"
