A WASHINGTON BYSTANDER
 BY KIRKE SIMPSON
 WASHINGTON—Assuming that Friend Al Smith was talking about Friend Frank Roosevelt when he declared war on "any candidate who persists in demagogic appeal," there must be something more than Roosevelt's celebrated radio address behind Smith's attitude.
 Roosevelt's most picturesque phrase in that speech was the bit about "the forgotten man at the bottom of the economic pyramid."
 Yet in accepting the democratic nomination in 1928, Smith said something about a republican party "benevolent oligarchy" that made the concern of government "not people, but material things."
 Smith pledged himself to strive for a "national well-being resting upon the prosperity of the individual men and women who constitute the nation."

PARALLEL
 There does not seem much difference in this instance between Roosevelt in 1932 and Smith in 1928.
 So it is reasonable to suppose that if Friend Al was in fact bombarding Friend Frank for demagoguery, he perhaps had more compelling reasons for it than the Roosevelt radio broadcast.
 There is still much mystery about this Al and Frank business. Nobody can deny that they seem to have severed diplomatic relations completely. Smith's speech sounded like the beginning of hostilities.
 Did Governor Roosevelt, after accepting his bid to the Jefferson day dinner, have advance information that Smith was going gunning for him and stay away to avoid the embarrassment that might result?

Roosevelt For Harmony
 The immediate reaction of his supporters to the Smith outburst was an effort to lush replies in Roosevelt's behalf. The Roosevelt-ers are for party harmony.
 Yet Governor Roosevelt took exception to the insistence of J. J. Shouse for a convention of unpledged delegates. He accepted that as aimed exclusively at the Roosevelt boom.

Roosevelt's radio speech was delivered after his decision not to attend the Washington pow-wow. He could not have known, therefore, that Smith intended to attack that speech. What did he know or suspect?
 In any event, the latest news from the Al-and-Frank front will add zest to the Pennsylvania and Massachusetts primaries April 26 when they clash over delegates.

MANHATTAN MIRRORS

NEW YORK, April 25 (AP)—Joseph Yost and his brother, Gilbert, arrived in New York on an excursion from Allentown, Pa., intending to return the same day. They overstayed and lost the advantages of their return tickets, and had no money for the full fare.
 Joseph had with him his accordion. Gilbert had brought along his cornet. They played to the delight of subway passengers and collected $6 before a policeman took them to the station for making music without a license. While they were waiting for arraignment, they played some more and collected $2 from their fellow prisoners.
 In court, Magistrate Curtis suspended sentence when they promised to use their $9 to return to Allentown.
 A big grey police dog captured a ferry boat and held it for an hour until police reserves arrived, recaptured the ship, calmed the fears of 200 passengers, and shot the pirate.
 Commuters between Manhattan and Weehawken, who were driven from the smoking salon by the onrush of the dog, who had boarded the double-ended vessel on the Jersey side. Deck hands locked the doors, with the dog inside, until the boat docked. A call was sent for the police, and the ferry boat was taken out of commission until the officers arrived, sixty minutes later.
 Three passengers were bitten, commuters were delayed, and a hundred stenographers were nervous all day thinking about it.
 Undergraduate expectations of large salaries have been severely slashed in the past 12 months, according to analysis of a senior survey at New York university.
 A year ago, the graduating class expected, as an average to be able to earn $15,000 a year within five

SAVING THE STOCK

SENATOR ODDIE and Congressman Samuel S. Arentz were quick to take advantage of the bounty of the government to secure a large allocation of the 40,000,000 bushel contribution of government wheat for Nevada.

The value of the amount of grain they secured for stockmen in Nevada is about $200,000, but this by no means represents its value to the state.

Owing to the drought of several years past, the sheep and cattle were in but poor condition to stand the cold of the winter and the very heavy falls of snow which buried natural forage too deep for weakened animals to secure readily. The value of the livestock saved is far in excess of the value of the feed. Had the stock been permitted to die the loss would have been enormous.

The government has been very prompt in making shipments where needed, the distribution being made under the officials of the Red Cross, who have the most efficient organization known for that purpose. The promptness with which they have met emergencies has given added value to the grain contributed by the government.

COPPER TARIFF

THE PROPOSAL to levy a tariff on copper imported from foreign countries is before congress. It is meeting serious opposition, strange to say, from those Americans who are heavily interested in the copper mines of the Belgian Congo and Rhodesia.

There, we are told, natives are trained to work in the mines and receive a very few cents a day, with which they are quite content. The copper ore is richer than that of the great mines of America, it is said. So copper may be laid down here from Africa cheaper than it can be produced in America.

So we find that Americans, owning property in Africa and South America, are fighting Americans owning mines in Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Montana and other states and attempting to turn thriving cities back to the desert and add thousands to the destitute unemployed of the country.

The only way known to protect the American copper industry is to place a tax on imported copper. If that is done by congress, the copper mines of the country can open again and the great industries based upon copper will be able to operate. Otherwise the copper mines of America will, we fear, never open again.

Those, including the Nevada delegation in congress, who are pushing the fight for a tariff on copper have our hearty sympathy. They need and should have the whole-souled cooperation of the people of the west in making their fight for the west.

GAINING GROUND

THE GENERAL opinion of the country is that business is improving slowly, yet surely.

From almost every industry in almost every part of the country we hear encouraging reports. A little improvement—not much, but enough to prove that business is on the up-grade.

One thing there is against which we must school ourselves. We must not expect the market to get better each day. There will be relapses and declines between the spurts. And the improvement will be slow.

But as long as each week sees a slight increase in business activities we must be quite content.

It took more than ten years to create the top-heavy boom and speculative market which toppled in 1929. It probably will take that long to repeat the process.

Nevertheless it is absolutely certain that the human race will live on and demand that its wants be filled. The people want the good things of life and are willing to work in order to pay for them.
