QUICK ACTION NECESSARY

QUICK ACTION on the part of our congressman and senators at Washington is necessary if we are to secure legislation confirming the right of the state and county to levy taxes upon privately owned property located within the Boulder dam government reservation.

Since congress began its session we have permitted one thing after another to delay action until now, with the session nearing an end, we wake up to find that but little progress has been made on what, to us of Clark county, is the most important matter before the congress.

First, we permitted our attention to be absorbed by the possibility of securing a court decision settling our rights. We should have realized that such a suit would remain in court on appeal or otherwise, for several years and that Hoover dam would be completed before a final decision could be secured.

Then we were lulled into a false sense of security by the report that state officials were secretly framing a bill to which they hoped to get the approval of Secretary Wilbur. But the bill, when we were finally taken into the official confidence, covered too much of the mooted states rights question and instead of receiving the approval of the secretary, was met with firm opposition.

It is now time for Clark county to take up and carry on her own fight. Although the time remaining is short, there is still a possibility that a simple bill providing for the thing we consider most essential, may be passed.

Congressman Samuel S. Arentz, in a wire to the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce yesterday indicated hope that, by vigorous action, a bill might yet be enacted into law.

That bill may be a modification of either or both of two bills already before congress, one introduced in the house by Congressman Arentz, and the other introduced in the senate by Senator Oddie last January.

By keeping both bills under way, they may finally be combined by substituting one for the other and thus no time would be lost.

If the bills are limited strictly to the right of taxation and do not run the whole gamut of the states rights controversy, something may be accomplished. However, that is our only hope for action during the present session of congress.

CONGRESS DEFICIENT

CONGRESS, especially the lower house, is not meeting public approval. By its failure to act one way or the other upon the economy tax bill, the house is diminishing public confidence in our governmental and financial machinery.

In the present crisis, action is the first essential. We may differ in methods of bringing relief, nevertheless private interests and opinions must give way to the necessity of reassuring the nation.

It is not nearly so important what congress does or how it does it as it is that they DO SOMETHING.

Whatever form the legislation takes it will be better than this long period of doubt and uncertainty which congress has promoted through its inaction.

MANHATTAN MIRRORS

By United Press
NEW YORK, May 6. (U.P.)—One of the town's colorful characters was removed from circulation today when Francis Giannini, 32, was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term not exceeding three years after he had failed satisfactorily to explain his presence in somebody else's suite at the Hotel Plaza. In 1923 Giannini made the Sunday supplement with his theory of inter-planetary bridges and his advice to Commander Richard E. Byrd to look for a terminal of the Earth to Mars at the South Pole. Giannini explained his presence in the Hotel Plaza by saying that he had mistaken it for the Hotel St. Moritz.

Gypsy fortune-tellers do not trouble to learn new tricks because it would be a waste of time. Elizabeth Freedman, 22, complained to police that she gave $100 in currency to a gypsy woman who promised to return the money in three days after "blessing" it to insure success in a love affair. The romance failed to take a turn for the better and Miss Freedman, disillusioned, called for her money. But the fortune-telling establishment had moved. Police arrested Marie Williams, 68, who swished her colorful skirts and shawls and disclaimed all knowledge of the affair.

Langlan Heinz, the scholarly gentleman found sitting out the depression on a Flatbush dump, was in the hand of friends today. Graduate of the University of Colorado, holder of responsible engineering positions in many parts of the world, Heinz finally missed a boat to Africa for a prospective job and retired, penniless, to the dump. Frank G. Ashe of Far Rockaway gave him a $250 a day job as laborer pending arrival from Boulder of Dr. Henry White Callahan, of the Colorado Preparatory school, who wired that he was en route here to help the stranded technician.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dallas Texas, May 2, 1932.
Editor, Las Vegas Age.

Sir:
I have just read your editorial of April 27, with reference to the selling of bonds for the lateral sewers, and as you state in this editorial, the expenditures for your main sewers can only be utilized after your laterals have been built.
It is far from economy to hold up the construction of your laterals, due to the bond market today, for the simple reason that when bonds are being sold at par, and the financial market is in a very healthy condition, then all materials entering into this contract are higher priced than at present, and the contractors have more work on hand and more prospective work in the making, and contractors are not so anxious to work on such a small margin of profit as they are today.

We find from our experience of a great many years at this business, that when a city has to sell their bonds at less than par, they get more in the way of construction for their dollar expenditure, so it works out about the same, regardless of what the bond market might be, and I am of the opinion that the city would be very foolish to delay this much needed improvement, both from an economic standpoint, and from that of the betterment of your city in general.
I wish again to congratulate you on your editorial.
Yours very truly,
DAVID J. MAY, Jr.,
Vice-President,
Fueller Construction Company.
