

PENIEL MISSION DISCONTINUED IN NORTH LAS VEGAS

The Sunday night service at Peniel Mission was the final service of that institution in Las Vegas. Peniel Mission was opened in Las Vegas last October by Paul M. Hart, who came here from Los Angeles to investigate religious work at Boulder City. Mr. Hart, coming to Boulder City, at about the same time "Parson Tom" Stevenson arrived there, did not desire to start a second movement which would run counter to that already being undertaken. He then turned his attention to Las Vegas. The condition of families living in the North Las Vegas area drew his attention, especially did the condition then prevalent among the campers and squatters near the cemetery touch him. He took some pictures of the "camp" in which people lived, went to Los Angeles and told his story and came back and opened Peniel Mission. During the winter several hundred articles of clothing and bed clothing were dispersed to needy families. Food and medical aid were given to many. For a time Mrs. Hart conducted a free school in the mission to accommodate children who would not attend the Las Vegas city schools because of being chided about their clothes. Mr. and Mrs. Hart labored almost unceasingly in their efforts at the mission. They received no support from their Peniel headquarters and their total receipts from local persons who could support amounted to less than $50 during their entire stay, though they expended many times this amount. Mr. Hart said, at his farewell Sunday night, "We tried entering into temporal work to carry our expenses but our congregation objected that they were neglected. We believe, therefore, that it is the will of God that the work of Peniel Mission in Las Vegas cease." Hart is a regularly licensed preacher in the Free Methodist church and Mrs. Hart is a trained missionary worker. As to their future plans, Hart says that it is likely, after his church's annual conference in June a Free Methodist church will be established here and at Boulder City.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By OTTO E. STRUM (United Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, May 16 (AP)—The stock market rallied sharply late today after more than 100 stocks had been driven down to new bear market lows. Rising wheat prices and reports that Republican and Democratic leaders in congress were getting together on the tax bill caused the upturn. Steel jumped from 26 1/4 to 28 1/4, Du Pont from 26 1/4 to 29 1/4, American Telephone 93 to 97 1/4, American Can 24 1/4 to 27 1/4, Westinghouse 21 1/4 to 24 1/4, and Consolidated Gas and Consolidated Gas 4 1/4 to 4 3/4. While some of the top prices were shaded before the close, the list in general closed up 1 to 2 points. Many traders were forced to sell their stocks early in the session because their accounts had been liquidated by last week's big drop. Impairment of this kind made it felt particularly in the rails and wide declines took place in Union Pacific, New York Central and other leaders. Practically all the carrier stocks were driven to the lowest prices on record. The weakness was infectious and before the late upturn Steel, Telephone and other industrial and public utility leaders sold at their lowest prices in many years. The railroad stocks average made a record low, while the industrial average was lower than at any time since 1904. When reports of closer congressional collaboration on the vital tax and budget tangles began to spread throughout the financial district, traders started to pay attention to some favorable business news that they had ignored in the pessimism that prevailed earlier. This included reports of improved automobile sales and increased building operations. Also, the steel industry entered its fourth consecutive week operating at 24 per cent of capacity, which, nowadays, is considered pretty good. Repercussions of the assassination of Premier Inukai of Japan were not felt in the stock market, but had a bad effect on Japanese bonds, which slipped 1 1/2 points. The yen broke sharply to a record low in the day's foreign exchange trading. Once the rally in stocks got under way, it was accelerated by a rise of more than a cent a bushel in wheat in response to sensationally bullish crop reports from southwest wheat fields, said to be suffering from drought and dust storms. DuPont was one of the day's outstanding features. Directors of the company, meeting in Philadelphia, cut the common dividend from $4 to $3 annually, and announced a 10 per cent reduction in pay of salaried employees. The stock was the most active on the board, sagging to 25 1/4, jumping back to 29 1/4, and finally closing at 28 1/4, up 1/2. Auburn Auto gave the heartiest response to better news from the industry, rebounding six points from its low to 28 1/4. Homestake Mining moved against the early trend, spurring to a new high for the year at 131. Cotton joined stocks and wheat in rising and, after holding around the previous closing levels of the day, perked up more than a dollar a bale in the last few minutes of trading.

the demand from all sources was limited. Trade was slow, with prices generally weak to lower. Top fat hogs brought $3.25. Trade was active with prices strong to 25c higher in the sheep department. Native spring lambs sold up to 26.50.
