PRIEST TALKS TO VETS IN CAPITAL

fraction of the men there, and spoke to them.

TALKS THEM TO STICK

"Stick it out," he shouted to the ragged army. "You will never get what you're entitled to unless you stick. Men are coming from every corner of the country and if you stick, before this is over there will be from 500,000 to 1,000,000 of you."

"If they won't give you this little bonus—offered you because your wartime pay was less than that of a common laborer—turn them out of office. Go home and organize against them. Send men here who will look after the people, not the 500 millionaires who control the national wealth."

Father Cox then read a resolution he had drafted, demanding that congress pass the bonus and vote for a bond issue for public works.

"Do you approve it?" he shouted.

"Yes," thundered the veterans.

NO, IT WASN'T LEGION; WEATHER TOO HOT FOR POP

It was the rush hour at Ward's Silver State market. Last minute shoppers were hurrying to make their purchases and get home for dinner.

Suddenly there was a deafening noise, followed by a shower of glass. Terrified shoppers looked around for the nearest exit. Clerks dropped behind convenient counters.

In the silence that followed, a dazed young man was seen standing in the middle of the store, holding a handkerchief to his head, a handkerchief which showed deepening blood stains.

The Legionnaires must have arrived, but "No." The excitement was caused by an innocent looking bottle containing a carbonated drink. Due to warmer weather, too much carbonation, or just the general unrest, the bottle had exploded, throwing glass all over the store, and cutting the young man on the head.

Clerks and customers soon came out of hiding, and Manager Tom Adams ascertained that the injuries of the innocent bystander were not serious.

The public immediately began to show a fresh interest in carbonated drinks.

As Public Defender Surrenders

Above, right, is Frank J. Egan, San Francisco public defender, shown as he surrendered at Golden Gate Park police station to answer to an indictment charging murder of his old time friend and benefactor, Mrs. Jesse Scott Hughes. Center is Egan's attorney, Vincent Hallinan, who was in touch with Egan while the latter was a fugitive. Egan calmly walked into the police station and gave himself up while police conducted a frantic search for him. He was booked on a charge of murder and lodged in jail.
