SUCCESS TO THE LEGION

THE AMERICAN Legion convention closed last night with the grand ball at Lorenzi lake park.

For three days, Las Vegas has had the honor and pleasure of acting as host to the state delegates gathered here. The Boulder City American Legion joined with Las Vegas in entertaining our guests, and a most unusual trip to the dam site and through one of the diversion tunnels was a feature of the convention. There were many opportunities for play, but there were also hours devoted to serious business.

May the affairs of the American Legion and its members prosper and may this great organization continue to exert its powerful influence for good upon the affairs of the nation.

TALK IT OVER

SOMEONE has said that there is no dispute which cannot be better settled by arbitration than by fighting. However that may be, the thought has occurred to us that the matter of taxation within the Boulder reservation could probably be settled satisfactorily if representatives of the Department of the Interior, Six Companies, Inc., Clark county and the state of Nevada were to confer on the matter.

So far neither party to the controversy has considered any argument but his own. A conference on the matter need be no confession of weakness by either side, but rather an indication of a desire to cooperate in the best way for all concerned.

If some agreement could be arrived at providing for the collection of certain taxes and the exemption of others, the county and state agreeing to the maintaining of schools and courts, it would, undoubtedly, be to the advantage of all concerned.

STUDENT RETURNS

Mike McNamee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo A. McNamee, returned yesterday from his school at Belmont, Calif. His sister, Frances McNamee, is expected home Tuesday.

BACK FROM UTAH

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Stewart, accompanied by Mrs. George Dever, all of this city, returned home last night from Salt Lake City, where they have been spending the past two weeks on their vacations.

VEGAS VAGARIES

This here new hot weather is awful tough on column conductors, and the contris have been clamoring for a chance, so we're going to leave the whole thing to them and adjourn to a cool bar we knew and meditate on the sins and follies of city editors, drat the rate.

Dear Cavern, Of Thing:
Say, after three days of this dog-gone Legion convention, can you imagine what a gang of hell raisers the Yanks were in gay Paree? Frimstance, what a top-kick a certain drum and bangle corps leader must have made! Sparks is next year's convention city, and I've got a couple of relatives up there that I'm gonna warn to nail up their windows.

The Sagebrusher.

INTELLIGENCE TEST NO. B538

Gentle reader (note the singular—it would be more singular if there were plural) . . . anyhow Gentle Reader . . . the idea of this test is to decide why the young lady in the picture is turning up her nose at the cool drink on such a hot day.

Answer: Because the pitcher contains ice tea.

Dear Cavern:

We were all having lunch at the Raquet Club, when Benny said to take a piece of coke, an' put it in a fish bowl.

Now sometimes it's the heat, and sometimes it's just Benny, so "Coke?" sez we. "Yeah, coke," sez Benny, "an' a fish bowl an' some salt an' blueing."

"Yeah," sez the demon soda jerk-er, "you take a piece of ordinary coke, an' you add four tablespoons full of salt an' four of blueing, and in a couple of days, letting it stand, you get flowers and trees, and little Eva going to heaven and all sorts of things."

"A piece of coke," I said to the coal man.

"Just one," I said, acting just as if it were a sane request.

"Take it out of that basket there," he sez, "but you better take two, one is hard to start a fire with."

And—"You gotta humor those guys," he said to the girl friend as I left.

Anyhow, I tried the great experiment, and it works.

And if you take and add a tablespoon full of perfume and one of mercurochrome, your flowers are all pink an' smell real purty.

Can you imagine little Eva going to heaven all pink and smelling purty? But try it, it works! The Sidewalks.

KEYHOLE PHOTO

Mental telepathic photo of the brain of our office gal when she sits before her typewriter these warm afternoons and gazes dopey-like out the window at the sky. The feller is either John Barrymore or somebody.

CONVENTION AFTERMATH

Above is a young lady of Las Vegas attempting to choose a demure gown . . . now that the Legion boys have wandered homeward.

INTIMATE GLIMPSE

And so, gentle reader . . . above is a foto of us and a perfectly swell case of brain fever from having had to write this week's effort . . . the doc says mebbe we won't survive so there's hope next week.

"God the Preserver of Man" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, June 12.

The golden text is from Psalms 95-6. "Thy righteousness is like the great mountains; thy judgments are a great deep; O Lord, thou preservest man and beast." Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Sing, O heavens; and be joyful, O earth; and break forth into singing, O mountains; for the Lord hath comforted his people, and will have mercy upon his afflicted." (Isiah 49:13.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy: "The History of Christianity furnished sublime proofs of the supporting influence and protecting power bestowed on man by his heavenly Father, omnipotent mind, who gives man faith and understanding whereby to defend himself, not only from temptation, but from bodily suffering" (page 387.)

THIS PAPER HAS SOME INTERESTING NEWS ABOUT OLD FRIENDS OF YOURS

WHENEVER you find an item about some one you used to know, or see the picture of a once-familiar place, there's an extra thrill in the news of the day. Fading memories grow bright . . . in a flash you begin to "remember when—"

Actually every newspaper you read is full of good news about friends of yours . . . friends that come into your home every day to help get the work done . . . friends you take with you when you go out . . . friends that make life easier, brighter, richer.

These friends are the foods, the clothes, the furnishings—the many modern comforts you meet in the advertisements. You know them well . . . know how they look and what they can do. Naturally you like to read all the news about them, for even old friends are constantly changing, growing more interesting, offering new ideas.

Advertisements bring you fresh and reliable news of things you could hardly do without. Form the habit of reading them thoroughly every day. Watch them for news of your friends—old and new.
