El Portal Cuts Night Price To Forty Cents

The new U. S. tax schedule puts a tax of 10 per cent of the admission price to theatres on all admissions over 40 cents. In order to avoid charging this tax to patrons, El Portal theatre announces that starting with today's show the regular evening adult admission will be 40 cents, on which there will be no government tax.

El Portal is offering an especially attractive program today to celebrate the new policy, the feature picture being "West of Broadway," starring John Gilbert with a great supporting cast headed by the Swede comedian El Brendel, two leading ladies, Lois Moran and Madge Evans, and Ralph Bellamy. The story is a 1932 style romance

Although the turtle-neck sweater rage started by Clark Gable has a firm hold on most of Hollywood's males, Jack Oakie refuses to abandon his time-honored sweat shirt. Oakie wears them almost everywhere he goes.

Columbia has made deal with Samuel Goldwyn to borrow Barbara Weeks for stretch of one year.

shot through with action and thrills that sweeps from the White Lights of Broadway, to the great outdoors of the western desert. In addition, the program will include a two-reel comedy, starring Ford Sterling, a regular screen song and latest MGM news, also selections on the Wurlitzer organ by Carolyn Selby. There will be a matinee at 2:30 today and evening shows at 7:15 and 9 p. m.—Adv.

Chaplin In 'City Lights' Will Be Shown At Airdome Sunday, 26

Probably the most hilarious scene ever brought to the screen is included in Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights," the picture that is heralded as the outstanding achievement of the great comedian's long career, to be shown at the Airdome theatre starting Sunday, June 26.

The sequence in question depicts a night at a mediocre fight club and introduces Chaplin as a pugilist. Incidentally this is the first time that the comedian has appeared in the squared arena since he produced, many years ago, "The Champion."

In order to provide the truly Chaplinesque atmosphere, the entire area of the big indoor stage was transformed to represent a fight stadium, with the necessary training quarters and dressing rooms. It is here that Chaplin goes behind the scenes to reveal the antics of the fighters and their trainers before entering the ring.

More than a thousand persons were used for this scene. The spectators, all men, filled to overflow the arena. At least fifty per cent of the numbers were one-time boxers. Flashes of several bouts are shown and also the entire contest between Chaplin and his opponent, enacted by Hank Mann. These two put on a fast two-round affair and from all reports it is the most humorous and readable striking match ever recorded by the camera.

DOTS AND DASHES

The denizens of cinemaland have settled back in their comfortable divans, easy chairs, etc., to read Tashman, there's a whole week of good pictures at the open air theatre. Today James Hall, Mae Clark and Marie Prevost hold forth in "The Good Bad Girl," the story of a gunman's moll who tired of the racket and sought an out where she could find real love.

For those who like spinal tingles brought on by mystery melodrama, "The Phantom" can be recommended as a sure fire thriller. On the same bill is "The Cyclone Kid" in a wild and woolly western drama that is replete with scraps and blazing guns. The double show is Tuesday and Wednesday.

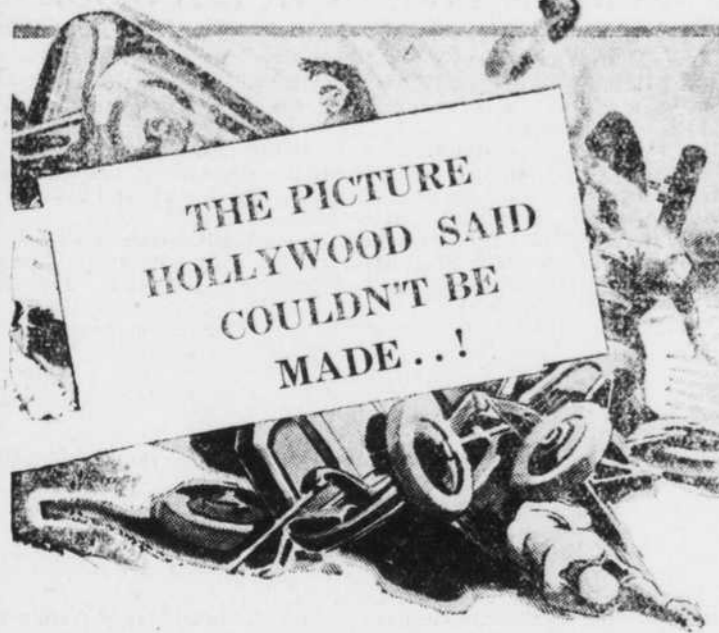

Ronald Colman as the suave and cunning "Raffles," well-known English drama of a super-crackman, will be shown Thursday and Friday. The week ends with "The Man From Death Valley," and "The Menace."
