THE DIFFERENCE

THE REPUBLICAN convention in Chicago was one of the most harmonious in the history of political parties. The vast majority of the delegates were in entire accord as to candidates. It was simply a question of obeying the popular mandate when the nomination of Hoover and Curtis took place. There was slight opposition to both—rather there were persons who had developed personal ambitions. But it did not take the form of personal bitterness nor destructive politics.

With the Democrats the situation is quite different. The nomination long since ceased to be a matter of the office seeking the man. It has degenerated into the fiercest possible conflict, each candidate seeking to advance himself by discrediting the others. Personal bitterness long since became the dominant note in the contest. Party policies or principles are lost in the melee.

Whoever the Democrats may nominate at Chicago there will be scars left which will not soon be forgotten either by themselves or by the Republicans.

SOME JOBS

WE ARE TOLD that in the United States despite the vast number of the unemployed, there are thirty-eight million persons who have jobs, and that those jobs are the very best jobs that there are in the world.

Which, probably, is the reason why there is no widespread starvation in America even in these times of terrible distress. The average human being with a good job desires to help his fellow men and women who are in distress. And so we see that quite, private, almost secret aid has done much to alleviate the suffering of the millions of unemployed.

A country with so many good jobs as there still are in the United States certainly has a good basis upon which to build a new prosperity.

VEGAS VAGARIES

INTELLIGENCE TEST

To the gentle reader who discovers that this week's Vagaries is really vaguely "Around the Town" . . . first prize, one concrete bicycle. Truly, however, gentle reader, it's a real treat. We've hidden away in a cave al lday today with a tub of ice, some pajamas, strong adjectives, a thermometer, and . . . oh, yes . . . near beer!

Ever Thine (gloatingly),
CAVERN.

Today's medal goes to the anonymous suggester that the Fuller Construction company play flood lights on an their large pieces of equipment, so that municipally owned cars can miss them.

We are alarmed at the recent story agent a California city's barraging of the "Her Hero" billboard, where a cowboy honky gator at an advertisement for a famous brand of "makans." Our alarm arises from the fact that there is ONE such billboard in Las Vegas, out north, near street . . . near a pile of rubbish!

Check! Department: A Promiscuous automobile dealer driving one of his best products, stuck on Fremont, he was sued by a car from a rival dealer, temporarily owned to the police department, which gave him the necessary shove to restart his own machine.

Humph, snorted the Old Times yesterday as he peered through the windowpanes at the government thermometer while the meter was wobbling around the 112 degree mark. "If she jes' climbs a open row, we're liable to get the best out of the ground, and have some real summer weather for a change."

REVERIES IN RETROSPECT

"How about a drink with that big partner?" Sergeant Jones looked up from the note book, started as if someone had said "sit up," and regarded a short bow-legged figure, wearing slightly from some previous jail. "You know, the one that you took away from me last Christmas," repeated the worthy individual, in a slightly thickened voice.

"Surely, that jug is long gone," said the sergeant, "and you'd better get gone, or you'll be in another jug in a minute."

"As the short bow-legged individual made for the door with an audacious grin of visions of the local 'hoosegow.' "Damned if it don't take all kinds of people to make a town," says Sergeant Jones.

Shades of the doughboys in Paris! A pocketbook was found in the outskirts of the city yesterday and turned in at a local office staffed by me. Examination of the contents revealed a part of a miniature playing cards with transparent backs. Hood them to the light, and . . . well, remember those post bellum Paris posters.

At least two policemen and a neuman know what it feels like to be shot at, after yesterday afternoon. Not actually, but all the sensations were there, when someone shot off a fire-cracker in the police station—while the three were inspecting—and handling rather freely—an officer's nice new gun.

PEGGY GOES A'SHOPPING

By PEGGY
Summer temperatures not only create a new interest in clothes for appearance sake, but make one cast about for newer and cooler creations.

Bracken's Apparel Shop this week has an excellent showing in after noon silks: a plainly fashioned white silk dress, flowered with dark green leaves, is especially adapted for summer afternoons. The short sleeved jacket of corresponding material makes this dress practical also for early evening wear.

Dame Fashion did not overlook pajamas and hanky underthings either when she started the "net" vogue for summer wear. Pajama at Ronzone's are fashioned of silk rayon and net, the rayon being set in down the middle front and set or the trouser legs. The entire back is of net material, striking a new note in summertime sleeping tops. Along with these sets are show net panties and the net step-in with lace bandeau top, in the popular and dependable Munsing wear.

The Hollywood Style shop show an afternoon frock of white crepe made in tailored lines. The Olympian idea of color is carried out in the trimming of red and blue scarf tied on the left shoulder. A red and blue crepe design is set in between the waist and skirt, giving a dash of color to this otherwise plain dress. With matching accessories including hat and footwear, we choose this dress as a dressy, though practical, addition for any wardrobe.

At Carroll's Gift and Tossery we are shown a fresh blue voile, with plain, full skirt. This is something new, in that it has no contrasting color or lace for trimming. The cape collar is fashioned of the same material, hemstitchd onto the dress. The waist pattern is a "v" which is also hemstitchd into the body of the dress. This idea in hemstitching is novel and until recently has been little used this season.

For the plain white, or black and white outfit, we find becoming accessories at the Colonial Shop. Gloves, fashioned of white material, stitchee with black, add a chic touch, which match the black trimmed bag. Too, we find the ever popular mits of lightweight mesh, in white trimmed with black, or if you prefer, tan trimmed in black. Lovely designs in handkerchiefs, either in linen or the daintier materials add delight to anyone's summer ensemble. Neckties, earrings and wristlet complete these sets, which help greatly to enhance a summer outfit.

Beckley's are still uppermost in our mind for sheer hostery needs in Allen-A or Phoenix wear—and for summer comfort we find here new low-cut styles in house slippers. In varied colors and sizes these serviceable and dainty slippers for wear about the house add much to summer comfort while you work, or lounge about.

For those who care to spend their summer afternoons in adding to their wardrobe, delightful frocks can be fashioned from the prints and voiles now on display at Adcock & Ronnow's. Sheer voiles in a number of shades and flowered designs make up into ideal dresses so practical because they launder prettily. Silk, bias-cut slips are al-
