

First Sailing from Seattle

The President Grant as she pulls away from her berth at Pier 41 in Seattle. The President Grant was the first American passenger boat to leave Seattle since May 12. A previous sailing was held up by Customs Inspector Saul Haas on the grounds that the ship was improperly loaded and manned.

He Calls His Job "Unimportant"

Vice President John Nance Garner

NO MATTER what toastmasters and caption writers may say, Vice President Garner insists that his job is not the second most important post in the United States government. "Delightful it is," he says in the American Magazine, "but almost entirely unimportant." He calls himself, in fact, "merely the spare tire on the national automobile." The photograph shown above is a new one, considered the best likeness of the Vice President which has yet been made. It was done specially to illustrate the whimsical biographical article in which Garner tells how unimportant he considers his job. It is highly regarded by Garner's friends and admirers because it shows his ruddiness and geniality, his unruly white hair and unbelievable eyebrows.

The Old, Old Ring Story

It's an ancient tale of the ring—the ex-champion battling for another crack at a title. This time it's two former kings, Mickey Walker, once middleweight and welterweight titleholder, and Young Corbett III, ex-welterweight king. They meet in San Francisco Aug. 14 in a middleweight fight sponsored by the Press Club of San Francisco.

Asks $1000 a Month

George Bancroft, movie actor, and his first wife, Edna, who this week in Los Angeles met for the first time in 17 years. The meeting, held in the offices of Atty. Sam Hahn, was for the purpose of settling out of court Mrs. Bancroft's suit for $1000 a month separate maintenance. Mrs. Bancroft charges the actor deserted her in 1917. Bancroft declares he secured a divorce, but is unable to locate the written decree.
