Mining Aided By Appointment Of Tasker Oddie

WASHINGTON — Additional assurance that the Administration desired a liberal and sympathetic understanding of the financial problems facing the mining industry in its efforts to secure Federal funds for developing worthwhile properties, was evident with the appointment last week of Tanker L. Oddie, former United States Senator from Nevada, as special mining advisor to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Oddie, who was personally appointed by Jesse Jones, director of the RFC, is to work with that agency in an advisory capacity to its board of directors, with a view of bringing about the widest possible cooperation between the RFC and the mining industry.

As president of the Gold Mining Association of America, Oddie, who is credited with the original development of Tonopah, Nevada, one of the largest producers of gold and silver in this country, has been personally active in national mining circles since his retirement from the political field. His new duties will keep him in the West where he will personally examine all mining projects applying for Federal loans.

PITTMAN GRATEFUL

Senator Key Pittman is appreciative and grateful to the people of Nevada. In a message to The Age, the Senator says:

I am deeply appreciative and grateful for the confidence the citizens of this state have reposed in me by their generous vote in the primaries. I have no way of adequately expressing my gratitude except through my services for the people and for the interests of this state. This is my sole ambition and my sole work.

KEY PITTMAN
