of power necessary to make the contracts operative.

Present indications are that this point will be reached in June of this year.

"Whether we can work out our problem that way or should put in our own generator, remains to be seen. Whatever way it works, I am confident that the price will not be higher than the figures set by Mr. Scattergood," he stated.

"There has been a bill introduced in the Arizona legislature calling for the establishment of a new Colorado river commission with sufficient funds to allow it to function properly," Carpenter said. They seem definitely interested in our proposal to go in together on the installation of a generator and we maybe able to work something out."

Mr. Carpenter left Monday for Arizona, planning to stop in Kingman and talk with interested people there and then go on to Phoenix for further discussion with state officials.

A Missouri editor says that a farmer is his own boss; that he can work when he pleases and quit work when he pleases. Guy Dyer says that he has known several farmers who tried to go along that trail of thought but they ain't farmers any more.—Greenleaf, Kan., Sentinel.

Rotarians Hear Scouts Run City

At Thursday's meeting of Las Vegas Rotary Club, Tim Harnedy, one of those whose birthday comes in February, told of his birthplace, County Cork, Ireland, and of his youthful dreams of coming to America, "The Land of Opportunity."

He finally got across when he was 21, but met with many disappointments until he located at Indian Springs, where he has been prosperous and happy ever since.

Walter Bracken reported on the meeting of Boulder City Rotary Club Wednesday and stated that the club is planning a regular party on the occasion of its charter presentation.

Ralph Lowry of the Boulder City Club was assigned to present a program to the Las Vegas Rotarians next Thursday.

Leslie Edwards presented a group of Boy Scouts who represented the Las Vegas city government for the day. The subject was "A Bigger and Better Las Vegas."

Mayor Bobbie Hampton declared for cheap power and an adequate supply of water for industrial purposes.

Finance Commissioner Jack Pettit promised to watch the city finances and cut expenses, but favored a more extensive campaign to advertise our scenic attractions.

Harold Friedman, commissioner of lights and sewers pledged himself to eliminate all cesspools and other unsanitary conditions; to keep the business district free from rubbish and to provide plenty of street lights.

Chet Gilbert, street commissioner, advocated improved parks and playgrounds for recreational purposes, especially a municipal swimming pool.

Don Crenshaw, police and fire commissioner, is interested in reducing the number of highway accidents. He advocated strict enforcement of existing laws and the installation of electric traffic signals on some downtown intersections. He particularly complimented K. O. Knudson on the patrol established on streets near the grammar schools.

Bill Gustine, city clerk, told how the collection of city licenses had increased from $12,000 per year to $60,000, and pledged a continuance of the license policy.

Bob Eglington, city engineer, said he is in favor of improving the municipal golf course, the municipal airport and, if weather continues as at present, a municipal ice skating rink.

Donald McBurney, city electrician, declared in favor of a bright city and said Las Vegas has more signs per capita than any other city in the world.

Eldon Bellinger, chief of police, advocated picking up and fingerprinting all suspicious characters, and approved the two-way radio system installed by the police department. He also stressed cooperation with the sheriff's office and the Boulder City officers.

Robert Cardinal, city attorney, stated with vigor: "I am the highest paid and hardest working member of the city administration. It is my job to keep the rest of these fellows out of jail. When the mayor wants to dodge an issue he just looks at me and I take the blame. Why shouldn't I get paid?"

Gay Meyer, editor of the Review-Journal, pledged support to the city administration.

Nevada Power Rate Is Fixed

.30 mills is a fifty percent increase over the rate set by Mr. Scattergood to cover amortization of the power plant and lacks only .16 mills of the figure set as the cost of operation and maintenance of the power plant and replacements.

The announcement of Mr. Scattergood gives Nevada confidence that Los Angeles will deal fairly in the matter of power withdrawals under the government contracts.

Moreover, the assurance of approximately accurate figures on the cost of contracting Nevada power will revive and continue the interest which several large concerns have shown in the power situation in the Boulder Dam area.

Keegle Falls Breaks An Arm

Pete Keegle, engineer in charge of operations at the Eldorado Rover mine in Eldorado Canyon, had the misfortune to step on a loose board and fall, breaking his left arm while superintending the completion of the milling plant at the mine on Saturday last.

Mr. Keegle's injuries were treated by Dr. Forest R. Mildren at the Mildren Clinic and the patient is getting along nicely.

THE PROGRAM

Before congress met some persons have wondered whether the President proposed to leave the Supreme Court as it is and amend the constitution, or leave the constitution as it is and amend the Supreme Court. The annual message suggests that it is his plan to leave the constitution as it is and retain the Supreme Court as an interesting historic exhibit.—New York Sun.

In the good old days they gave grandpa a moustache cup for a birthday present. Now they present him with a tuxedo. The times do change.
