

Red Rioters Run Amuck At Arena

While a few struggled to free Holland from execution by hanging, others grappled with the Devil and each other until even the experts could not tell who was fighting who.

As things quieted down, Herb Waldman, referee, declared a short armistice while order was being restored and Holland was being nursed back to a state of health which would permit him to endure another session of manslaughter.

Thereafter, the Devil raised Holland above his head and hurled him to the mat a couple of times with great force, thoughtfully thrusting his knee under the descending back so as to produce the most painful possible results, leaving Holland again stunned and helpless.

Again the crowd showed a desire for a chance to inflict bodily harm on the Devil, a spirit which, were it possible to introduce it into religious organizations, would result in early salvation of the world.

On the whole, no great harm was done, although the market for new shirts to replace those riddled in the riots was booming Friday morning.

Announcer Fred Alward stated that the identity of the Masked Devil is unknown to the public, but that a prize will be given the person first disclosing his name. The mystery, it seems, is deep and dark red.

Herb Waldman officiated as referee for the two main events in an efficient manner, at times doing most of the wrestling.

The preliminary between the Greek god, Jimmy Serandos, and Les Grapes, although lacking in the various degrees of mangling and murder which characterized the so-called main events, was rough and tough enough to suit the requirements of even our most sweet and retiring lady wrestling fans.

Jack Larry, popular local wrestler, presided as referee and the hearty booing with which he was received, proved conclusively that Jack is dear to his public. "Whom the crowd loves best they boo most" seems to be the motto. Yet we wonder, considering the many fine services Jack has given to the sports arena in Las Vegas, if it would not be pleasant and reassuring if the fans would once in a while give Jack Larry the applause which is his due, instead of so much dissembling. Perhaps Jack is indifferent, but his friends would enjoy hearing credit given where due.

The first fall in the Serandos-Grapes go was won by the Greek in decisive order with an airplane spin.

The second fall found Larry one of the most active participants in the go. The fighting was rough and tough and the fall was won by Grapes through a series of manslaughter.

The third chapter found Serandos the favorite with the crowd because of the slugging, kicking and knee-work used by Grapes. However, Serandos won the fall and the match by giving his opponent an airplane spin. And was Grapes sour?

Because of the busy week of counter attractions and the approach of hot weather, attendance was smaller than had been anticipated for so good a program. It is probable that Matchmaker Tinch will declare an armistice for a couple of months.

Nevada Mining Enters New Era

Last Friday the Humboldt Star announced that George B. Austin, 63-year-old miner, who has believed in mining since he settled at Jungo 27 years ago, had sold his famed Jumbo mine in the Slumbering Hills for a cool $10,000,000.

The sale, as announced by the Star, was to J. K. Wadley and H. L. Hunt, widely known oil and mining developers.

The main features, as appearing in Friday's issue, read as follows:

$10,000,000 INVOLVED

Provisions of the sale, contained in the papers filed with County Recorder J. L. Germain include annual payments of $100,000 from royalties; the right of lessees to purchase the property outright at any time within 20 years for $10,000,000 with annual payments of $1,000,000.

Down payment for the property, it was reliably reported, was $250,000. This is shared between Austin, his wife Bernice; their two sons, Kenneth and Wilfred; their daughter, Mrs. Bonnie Jean Sobrio of Reno, and Austin's brother, Jess S. Austin.

Wadley initiated his participation in the Awakening district development a year ago with the purchase of properties in Davetown. He has already erected a mill there.

INTERESTED HUNT

Wadley then succeeded in interesting the Hunt brothers, it was reported, and Sherman Hunt accompanied Wadley to Winnemucca several weeks ago to act as agent in the negotiations.

Hunt, represented in Winnemucca by his brother, Sherman Hunt of Tyler, Texas, who is also in the deal, first achieved national renown as an extensive operator in the east Texas oil fields. He is reputed to be several times a millionaire. It was the Hunt brothers who are credited with bringing in the famous "Discovery" well near Tyler. Wadley, of Texarkana, Ark., is also a widely known independent oil operator, and is said to have been associated with the Hunt brothers in previous business arrangements.

WILL ENTER CASE

Simultaneously with their announcement of the purchase of the Jumbo mine, Hunt and Wadley announced they would enter the suit brought against Austin which was filed last fall.

Hunt and Wadley, their attorneys indicated will be named probably by motion before the court as successors to George Austin as defendant in the action, because of their purchase of the properties involved.

Lucius F. Chase of Los Angeles and M. A. Diskin of Reno are acting as attorneys for Wadley and Hunt. Diskin filed the purchase papers here.

Located as the Jumbo mine in February, 1935, by Staggs and Taylor, the claims were sold to Austin that year for a reported $10,000, of which $500 comprised a down payment. Since that time the full purchase price has been paid off.

Initial assay of the ore from the surface of the discovery shaft, made by a Salt Lake firm, showed a content of nearly $1,500 gold and 30 ounces of silver per ton.

Official description of the properties involved in the purchase are recorded as Jumbo number 1, 2 and 3 claims and Jumbo millsites, Jumbo millsite number 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7. The millsites, of five acres each, comprise a total of 35 acres of the property.

Estimates of the value of the Jumbo mines made by former President Herbert Hoover, John J. Raskob, democratic party leader, and others who previously had sought to purchase the property from Austin ran as high as $50,000,000.

COLORFUL BRYCE CANYON

WEIRD AND WONDERFUL. A fairyland in vivid colorings best describes the spectacle of Bryce Canyon National Park in southern Utah. Bryce is a huge bowl-shaped canyon filled with countless rock formations tinted in every shade of the rainbow. This is one of the most unusual of our national parks.
