

Dashiell Plans Hard Campaign

UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA, Reno, Sept. 9. — After two weeks of preliminary drills, to "whip" his 1937 Wolf Pack into condition for a tough campaign this fall, Doug Dashiell, varsity coach, officially took the field Friday, September 10th, and began directing his chargers through plays and passing attacks.

With approximately 60 men out for the varsity squad, the biggest job ahead of Coach Dashiell is to fill the vacancies left open by graduation last May.

About 25 veterans are out on Mackay Field amid a flock of freshmen from last year and new transfers from various junior colleges fighting for berths on the Wolf Pack eleven.

Big "Tex" McKinnon, 195-pound end, and Sam Basta, a 170-pounder expected to hold down the other wing end, are two of the returning veterans that Dashiell is expecting much from in end play.

In the back field there are such men as Pat Eaton, Bill Grubbs, Kenny Powell, Bob Metten, John Robb, and Jim Twombly. "Hum" Robb slated to take over much of the duties at the fullback position, will find a lot of competition from Jim Twombly, powerful 180 pound line plunger, with the exception of Joe Lommori, playing his last year for Nevada at the guard spot, the line needs complete revamping.

When asked about the outcome of the Wolf Pack for this fall Coach Dashiell said, "Right now I can't see any basis for optimism. The line has to be completely rebuilt from tackle to tackle. The backs and ends are satisfactory. If three or four of the inexperienced linemen prove themselves in competition, then things will look better. Yes, we'll continue to play the open style of game."

The following schedule for 1937 games has been announced:

- October 2 — University of Wyoming at Reno.
- October 9 — St. Mary's at San Francisco.
- October 16 — Chico State at Chico.
- October 23 — College of Pacific at Reno. Homecoming.
- October 30 — California Aggies at Reno.
- November 6 — Fresno State at Reno.
- November 13 — Santa Barbara State at Santa Barbara. Night.
- November 25 — Willamette University at Reno. Thanksgiving.
- *Far Western Conference games.

Lewis Returns From Vacation

Attorney J. R. Lewis returned home last week after a month's vacation, most of which he spent in the Pacific northwest.

Among other enjoyable incidents of the trip, Mr. Lewis reports, was a stay in Astoria, Oregon, original capital of the state, and a visit to the Grand Coulee dam, now being built under direction of the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation.

Although the Grand Coulee dam will require more yards of concrete in its construction than did Boulder dam, it is not nearly as impressive or beautiful from a visitor's standpoint," said Mr. Lewis.

"The dam is something more than a half mile in length and not nearly so high as Boulder dam, but it is a great engineering feat. I was especially interested in the series of pools, each a little higher than the one into which it pours its water, designed to act as a 'fish ladder' whereby the salmon will be able to pass from below to above the dam by means of a series of jumps."

Mr. Lewis returns to his office much refreshed by the vacation.

Junior Chamber Helps Students

The Junior Chamber of Commerce has started a very meritorious enterprise in establishing an employment bureau for the benefit of high school students who wish part-time employment.

There are many students in Las Vegas whose school year would be made much easier and happier through such assistance as the business men of Las Vegas can profitably afford to offer in the way of employment.

On the other side of the question there are many business houses who can with convenience and profit employ some of the students on a part-time basis.

Those interested may obtain full particulars by calling Frank McNamee, Jr., president of the Junior Chamber, at any time.

Wild Turkeys To Be Planted Here

Extensive plans for the planting of new species of game animals and birds in Clark county have progressed during the summer and definite action taken by the Southern Nevada Fish and Game Protective Association. One of the important matters is the perfection of arrangements with firms in New Mexico and Texas for the purchase of four pairs of Merriam turkeys. These turkeys have been recommended for areas on which food and cover conditions are similar to those on Charleston Mountain and have proved to be a very hardy bird wherever planted in the above states. They will be shipped to Las Vegas for planting in the near future as soon as negotiations can be completed for their transportation.

With the cooperation of the U. S. Biological Survey through Robt. Towle, manager of the Boulder Canyon Wildlife Refuge, some numbers of sage-grouse are being shipped from southern Idaho for transplanting in selected areas throughout the county. The lower slopes around Charleston Mountain and suitable places in Pahranaget and Moapa Valleys offer excellent food and cover conditions. As grasses and other vegetation develop along the shores of Mead Lake, it is expected that sage-grouse will thrive there inasmuch as this bird eats considerable quantities of grass and weed tips, buds and seeds. Pinon nuts are also a favorite food as well as the seeds from various foothill and valley shrub species.

Through their division of Predatory Animal Control, the Biological Survey has been requested to assist in eliminating the large numbers of coyote and bobcats which inhabit most of the game-bird range in the county. If plans materialize, a trapper will be assigned to this duty in the near future.

The arrival of the posters for the Desert Game Refuge, which was set aside for game protection last year, has found several association members busy erecting these posters on the boundaries of the Refuge. Carrying of firearms is now prohibited within the boundaries of the Refuge and violators of this regulation will be reported by all members of the association.

Further plans will be laid at a meeting of the association which is to be held in the District Court room next Tuesday, September 14, at 7:30 p. m. This meeting will inaugurate the winter program and promises more activity than ever before for game protection and betterment in southern Nevada.

Mr. A. C. Barr of Ely, Clark county's representative on the Nevada State Fish and Game Commission, will be a special guest and all members and others interested are invited to be present. Committees are urged to have their reports ready for submission at this time.

About the only thing that we can see wrong with congress is that this time it seems to have lost its rubber stamp.
