The Philippine Islands are so well pleased with prospects for complete independence that President Quezon says they'd take it now — providing trade relations might not be disturbed with the United States.

Legion Treads Fifth Avenue

(By J. E. Jones)

NEW YORK, Sept. 26. — I saw the American expedition forces shove off to war in 1917, and I saw General Pershing astride his famous war-horse "Jeff" leading that never-to-be-forgotten parade down Pennsylvania avenue past President Wilson in his reviewing stand. They were as chastened and serious-looking young men as I shall ever see in my lifetime.

Again, I have been among those same men for several days here in New York City. The "big parade" up Fifth avenue was as fine a spectacle as ever pleased and satisfied the eyes of 2,000,000 spectators, of whom I was one today. I say "satisfied," because these men are the walking proof of the strength and progress of our great Republic. The chastened serious lads of 18 years past who broke into riotous disorders at their earlier gatherings still retain a very noticeable love for fun. But I give testimony that they are far more orderly, en masse, than most of the crowds I have seen in great conventions of certain fraternal organizations and national societies. National political gatherings are more disorderly.

A veteran policeman in answer to my question said: "Behave — why they are far above the average; the police are letting them run the city, and (he laughed) they seem to have improved on the work of the police."

Tonight I have been reading with great care the proceedings of their meetings, in which it is plain they stand behind their country in peace or in war, in prosperity or depressions.

So I have sat down in this hotel bedroom to write the above lines, and to add my words of approval, and prayers of thankfulness that we have in this country such men as have spoken in thundering tones for peace, and against any more hellish wars as they saw with their own eyes, in foreign lands, from which many of their friends and comrades never returned.

FIRST WIDOWS THEN WIVES

In order of precedence Miss Jeanette Rankin, smart and single, was the first congress-woman. What's more, she was elected on her merit. After that widows began to replace their husbands in the lower branch of congress.

The senate started out with a grand old lady from one of the southern states. It was a gesture to honor her, and she served for a day.

After that came widow Caraway of Arkansas. Then the widow of Senator Long of Louisiana. Now Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama has appointed his own wife as the successor to Senator Black who has just been elevated to the supreme court.

Some of the women have done very well in the lower house of congress. Now it is not unusual to choose them without reference to deceased husbands.

In view of results let us hope that the habit will never develop so that widowers will replace their departed wives in congress.
