Creel Is Head Of Association

Cecil W. Creel, director of the University of Nevada agricultural extension service, this week was elected president of the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Univer-organization in Washington, D. C.

Creel is one of the few men not president of one of the 51 institutions in the association to be elected as leader of the organization, and may be the only person except university heads to have received this honor.

Comprising the association are the land-grant colleges of each of the forty-eight states and those in Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

As head of the organization, Creel will be in charge of co-ordinating the work of the various institutions, which are financed, in part, by federal land grants and other federal aid for the special purpose of teaching the branches of learning related to agriculture and mechanic arts, without excluding other scientific and classical studies.

Creel is the second University of Nevada staff member to head a national organization of institutions of higher learning. President Walter E. Clark was vice president of the Land-Grant college group in 1933-34, and in 1931-32 served as president of the National Association of State Universities.

University of Nevada officials regard the election of Creel to the presidency of the association as a high tribute to the institution, since only two other land-grant colleges

W. E. HAWKINS IS ROBBED IN OWN FRONT YARD

A rather bold robbery occurred Saturday night about 8:30 when W. E. Hawkins was held up and robbed almost on his own doorstep, corner of Fifth and Ogden streets.

Mr. Hawkins had been at the Elks' club and was evidently followed to his home. As he was about to enter his gate he was grabbed and frisked.

Being taken by surprise he was unable to get any description of his assailant. Mr. Hawkins stated that the amount taken from him was less than $50.

Creel has been one of the most active men in the association in recent years.

In the year just closing, he has served as a member of the association's committee on relationships with the U. S. department of agriculture, as well as on the organization's important committee on legislation. Last year also he was chairman of the extension committee on organization and policy, which unites the efforts of the various agricultural extension services.

In previous years he has been secretary and chairman of the Land-Grant college association sub-section on extension work and member and chairman of the extension committee on organization and policy for the extension workers in the far western states.

As president of the association, Creel will inaugurate its fiftieth year. His election came at the meeting celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Land-Grant College movement.
