

Mr. and Mrs. Leo A. McNamee held "open house" Thanksgiving afternoon honoring Mr. and Mrs. Earl Schmidt of San Jose, Calif. Many old friends availed themselves of the opportunity to renew their acquaintance with Mrs. Schmidt, who as Bobby McChrystal is well remembered, and to meet her husband. The beautifully appointed table was presided over by Miss Frances McNamee and Miss Pauline Honrath.

Mrs. R. W. Martin was hostess to the members of the Hostess Club Tuesday. Luncheon was served by the Ladies of the M. E. church. The afternoon was devoted to needlework.

Everyday Cooking Miracles

BY VIRGINIA FRANCIS

Director Hotpoint Electric Cookery Institute

At a party not long ago I heard a young woman say, "I've had such a pleasant afternoon I hate to think I still have to prepare dinner for two hungry men when I get home." When I heard those words, I told her she might like to know about my recipe for Broiled Sausages in Parsnip Boats because, with only a little beforehand preparation, she can allow just fifteen minutes for the final touches her dinner needs when she gets home late in the afternoon.

She was surprised, I know, by my assurance that any dinner could take so little time and she looked askance at me. But I, knowing that the result would be so delicious that she would be completely "sold" on the idea once she tried it, gave it to her just like this:

Broiled Sausages in Parsnip Boats

1. Scrape and cut large parsnips in half and remove the center woody part, then boil them until tender, but not soft.

2. Brush parsnips with melted butter and season with salt and pepper.

3. Lay a link pork sausage in each hollowed parsnip "boat" secure with toothpicks and ring a slice of pineapple around the end of the parsnip. Brush the pineapple with melted butter.

4. Place the filled "boats" in the refrigerator until you are ready to broil them.

5. When ready to broil merely place the parsnip boats on the broil-

The next time I met my friend she confided that she had everything prepared and in the refrigerator and could hardly wait to get home and see how it "came out." She called me the next morning to say triumphantly that it was perfectly grand and that her husband would hardly believe that she had been out all afternoon!

As one woman to another I asked her what she had served along with the mixed grill. And it seems that she put to work some very original and practical ideas. There was fresh spinach, which she had prepared for cooking ahead of time; and she served it with hot French dressing. Instead of a salad she had small stalks of cheese-stuffed celery along with whole wheat bread and butter. And for dessert a date butterscotch pudding—intentionally left over from a pie filling which she had made the day before.

So you see, it's really a simple matter to take Broiled Sausages in Parsnip Boats and round them out with similar hurry-up dishes—make a dependable, delicious "afternoon out" meal.

Contest Looms On State Head

A spirited fight for president of the Young Democrats clubs of Nevada is possible, says the political writer of the Reno Gazette, when the clubs meet for their annual convention at Battle Mountain the weekend following Thanksgiving.

The contest, if there is one, it is indicated, will be between John Oldham, Elko assemblyman and speaker pro tem of the Nevada legislature, and Berkley Bunker, chairman of the ways and means committee at the last legislature.

At present Thomas Craven of Carson City is president.

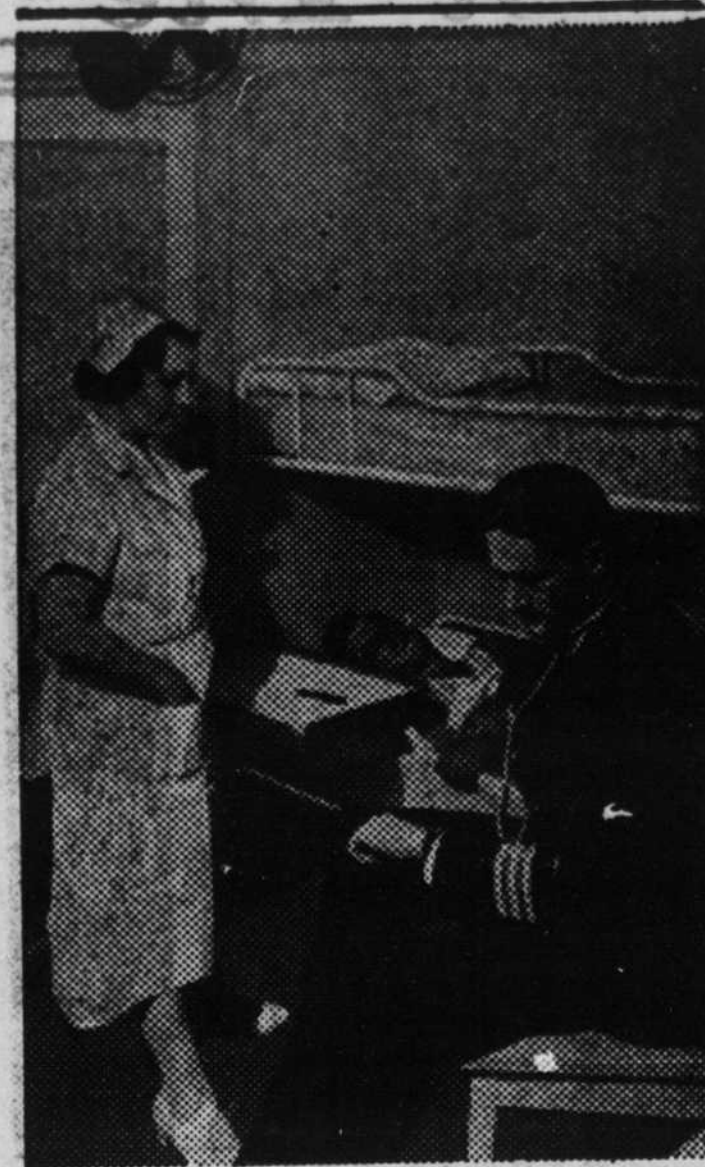

Malcolm McEachin, secretary of state, captured the Carson delegation for Oldham Friday night in a spirited meeting there, giving rise to the belief that a fight is on for the office.

Oldham, however, says the Gazette, has made no intensive campaign to get the seat.

Delegates for the convention are now being chosen in the various counties and at a recent meeting of the Young Democrats of Elko, Oldham and Bud Lukey were chosen as delegates.

District Attorney Roger Foley arrived from Reno Wednesday evening accompanied by his son, Roger and Richard Lee Williams, students at the University of Nevada.

FIRST AID

Accidents and sickness occur aboard ship no matter what precautions are taken. For such emergencies Grace Line ships are furnished with complete hospital facilities where ill seamen, such as this A.B. aboard the "Santa Lucia," are examined by a surgeon and tended by a registered nurse.

SILENT ALLY

THE modern automatic electric water heater is a silent ally to the comfort of the entire family. It requires no attention after installation, and can be depended upon to supply hot water for all needs of the family twenty-four hours a day. Smart modern styling and streamlined design of the Hotpoint Electric Water Heater, shown above, make it adaptable to "upstairs" installation, if desired, in the kitchen or bathroom of the modern electrified home.
