Los Angeles To Build New Line

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 7 — Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes today approved a contract with the City of Los Angeles under which the City agrees to construct a third circuit to Boulder Dam, and to buy certain stipulated amounts of secondary energy at one half mill per kilowatt hour.

The contract also sets up a formula which will govern future readjustments of rates for Boulder Dam secondary energy. All the contracts for the sale of power generated at Boulder Dam call for readjustment in 1945 and at ten-year intervals thereafter.

The City of Los Angeles now has in operation two high tension circuits 250 miles long extending from Boulder Dam to the city. Under today's contract the city agrees to construct at its own cost and to operate and maintain a third transmission circuit with the necessary switching station, receiving station facilities and the equipment necessary to increase the effective aggregate operating capacity of its transmission facilities by an amount of 150,000 kilowatts. The City of Los Angeles already had an option on secondary energy at Boulder Dam by which it could purchase the energy for one half mill per K.W.H. The new contract serves to set forth the terms on which the energy will be taken.

The city agrees to take if available during the period beginning with the completion of the third circuit, but not later than December 1, 1939 and ending May 31, 1940.

385,000,000 K. W. H. of secondary energy, and during the following year ending May 31, 1941, 490,000,000 K. W. H.; during the year ending May 31, 1942, 595,000,000 K. W. H.; and during each year of operation thereafter until May 31, 1945, 700,000,000 K. W. H.

The formula by which the sales price of secondary energy will be calculated at future readjustment dates is, in effect, as follows: The price of secondary energy at load center will be calculated on the basis of the price of firm energy minus the cost of standby plants and other equipment necessary to render the secondary energy as valuable as firm energy.

The paragraph in the contract covering this point is as follows:

"In all future readjustments of rates for Boulder Dam energy during the period of the Lease, the rate of payment for the use of falling water for the generation of secondary energy (which rate shall be uniform for all contractors having rights to secondary energy) shall be the price fixed, pursuant to the requirements of the then applicable law, for falling water for the generation of firm energy at Boulder Dam, plus fixed and operating costs of generation and transmission of such firm energy, less all, or such portion of all, reasonable fixed and operating costs as are chargeable specifically and solely to (1) generating and transmitting such secondary energy, and (2) producing, maintaining and intermittently operating such standby plant or plants as are necessary to make such secondary energy equally as reliable and continuously available as said firm energy."

The contract also extends the time in which the city is required to amortize the cost of generating machinery and equipment from ten to fifty years. The cost of the equipment, however, must be repaid with interest at four percent as was required in the ten-year contract. The contracts for the sale of Boulder Dam power have required throughout that purchases of the power operate and maintain the generating equipment and repay their cost. Title to the equipment remains in the United States.
