

Church Joins Disease War

The battle to eradicate venereal disease was given the support of the Episcopal Church of Nevada Sunday when a resolution endorsing the anti-venereal disease campaign was adopted at the thirtieth annual convocation of the Episcopal Church, meeting at Galilee, Lake Tahoe.

The resolution, adopted unanimously, follows,

"Resolved: The convocation of the missionary district of Nevada wishes to commend and thank Dr. Robert Caples, director of public health, for the vigorous course he has followed in his recent anti-venereal campaign. His work deserves the praise of all right thinking people, and we wish to assure him of the cooperation of the Episcopal Church in this district whenever possible."

The convocation also pleaded for observance of Good Friday as a full holiday, while officers and committees for the ensuing term were also chosen. Principal address was given by the Rt. Rev. Thomas Jenkins, D. D., Bishop of Nevada.

"Speaking generally and without recourse to figures," he said, "I believe it is safe to affirm that the church is moving forward, not in adding to our members alone but in her influence in the life of the people. Through mission stations, itinerant work and correspondence courses of study, we are covering the entire state."

Referring to remarks he is alleged to have made, he said:

"I did not say, as I am reported locally to have said, that Nevada is composed of people of broken homes. It was a malicious statement, to say that I did. And those who have found delight in reporting such a statement, have simply an axe to grind. But what matters? If a man does his duty, he is bound to have enemies. And I think we should be thankful for some enemies.

Repeats Statement

"What I did actually say was: 'Were it not for the broken homes of New York and the region hereabout, Reno would have something of a different history.'"

Commenting on the lack or coldness of home and school cooperation, Bishop Jenkins continued:

"Added to the indifference of the home is the monopoly of school activities. Our children's time is no has encroached upon it until it has invaded the sacred precincts of the Lord's Day. And those children who want to do their duty and whose parents do not care, feel themselves marked out as peculiar. It is much easier to talk of the totalitarian control of children in Germany and Italy than it is of the same thing in America. While in those countries the authority says they must submit, in our own land the authority makes it extremely hard not to do so.

"I am sure we ought to be very vigilant in every community lest there grow up a tradition that militates against the church's freedom to teach our children the faith of the fathers and founders of our republic. They were Christian men who cared for their religion enough to safeguard its outposts."

The convocation opened Saturday, with 33 delegates in attendance. Guests of honor were Bishop Frank Wilson of Eau Claire, and Miss Edna B. Beardsley, assistant secretary of the Women's Auxiliary to the National Council of the Episcopal Church.

Sacrifices Love For Patriotism

The dramatic story of a woman who sacrifices her love for one man so that she might send another away to the war with a beautiful memory without shattering his ideals, is the stirring theme of "The Shopworn Angel," starring Margaret Sullivan and James Stewart at the El Portal Theatre.

Miss Sullivan brilliantly portrays the role of a gold-digging show-girl who marries the young, naive soldier, James Stewart, because she wants him to go to France with a memory and also because he is the first man who has ever looked upon her as a fine woman. Her other sweetheart is Walter Pidgeon, the dashing man - about - town, who knows and loves her for what she is.

All three performances are excellent as are those of the other players including Hattie McDaniel, Nat Levine, Eleanor Lynn and Charles D. Brown.

The period of the picture is 1917 and all the color and excitement of the World War is included. H. C. Potter deftly directed the film.

"The Shopworn Angel" also marks Miss Sullivan's debut as a singer and dancer.

PICKETING ORDINANCE REVIEW BEING SOUGHT

RENO—Asking the Nevada Supreme court to set aside Judge T. F. Morans decision which held the city anti-picketing ordinance unconstitutional, City Attorney D. A. Busey filed a petition for a writ of review with the high court.

In his petition Busey asserts that the district court decision was in error, and asserts that the city measure is constitutional and within the powers of the city council.

The city picketing case rose last year when two men were arrested for picketing a Reno wholesale warehouse, which had been black-listed by the truck driver's union. The pickets were convicted and fined $10 at police court hearing, then appealed their conviction to the district court. After many delays, the hearing was held on March 11th of this year and on June 2, Judge Moran handed down his decision which held the city ordinance unconstitutional.

The tree was brought down the slope of the mountain by a snow slide during the winter and shows rings which indicate that it is 2500 years old, say forest rangers.

The rangers state that the tree is the largest of its kind ever found in eastern Nevada and probably in the state.

Plans are to have a portion of the tree placed in the county park with a suitable inscription.
