Earcupping
with George Livingstone

"We've had cycles in popular music, from jazz to mellow, slow tempos to our present-day swing," says Marek Weber, conductor of the NBC "Contented Hour" series, "but while dance music has been fluctuating from one extreme to the other, symphony has been making consistent gains."

As proof of his contention, he offers a comparison of the widely assorted musical fare offered the symphony-loving audience of today and the limited number of compositions which made up the symphonic conductor's music library a decade ago. Too, the trend is reflected in the vastly increased number of community concert orchestras.

The Customers Always Write

Analyzing his fan mail, Olan Soule (Sam Ryder of "Bachelor's Children" has found that it comes principally from feminine listeners, ranging from married women with grown sons to little girls, 10 to 12 years old. The mothers write because they are glad to see a young man getting along, the 20-year-olds write for pictures and the youngsters pick out an actor as a hero.

Jeanne Juvelier

Studio Jargon

Members of the "Public Hero No. One" cast have added a new phrase to studio lingo. They refer to short shows as "taffy pulls," a description inspired by the director's stretching apart of his hands as a signal to slow up. And Frances Carlon, star of "Kitty Keene, Inc.," submits the word "ordition," a neat combination of "ordeal" and "audition."

Born To Act

Heard as Angelina Pasquale in the NBC "Guiding Light" series, Jeanne Juvelier brings to radio the tradition of the Yiddish Theatre. Herself a veteran of eight seasons with that group, in association with such stars as Paul Muni and Sam Jaffe, she is the daughter of Kalman Juvelier, founder of the Jewish operetta, and Bina Abramowitz, famed leading lady of the Yiddish Art Theatre.

Plans Vacation

Margarette Shanna has arranged a fall vacation from her title role in "Arnold Grimm's Daughter," highlight of which will be a trip to New York to see the Broadway opening of Maurice Evans' "Hamlet." Her brother, Sydney Smith, will play the role of Laertes.

Gilding The Lily?

During one step in the production of "Judy and Jane" transcriptions, the wax master, in which the first impression is cut, is "sputtered" or bombarded electrically with pure gold, which forms an even plate a few atoms thick on the wax, and serves as a base for copper plating.

Saw America First

It takes a heap o' livin' to pack as much into 28 years as Spencer Bentley, star of "Betty and Bob," has done. He has appeared in 22 Broadway plays
