

Nevada Four-Aicher Wins Purebred

No Wonder He's Smiling!

For young Donald Chapman, Newlands project farm youth, is receiving the congratulations of Ernest Brooks of Rewana Dairy Farms, near Reno, on his winning of the Annual Prize of a Pure-bred Holstein bull calf donated by Brooks to the best Senior Dairy Judge having a dairy project at the recent Nevada Junior Farm Bureau Camp at Lake Tahoe.

And young Chapman's father, Donald Sr., is smiling too as he watches his son rewarded for the prowess he has shown in his 4-H Club dairy work.

Prize Bull Calf Won By 4-H Lad

The fifteenth purebred Holstein bull calf which has gone into the building of high producing dairy herds in Nevada through 4-H club members was delivered last week to its youthful new owner.

Presented by the Rewana Dairy Farms in Washoe county to the 4-H youngster who proves himself to be the best senior dairy judge with a dairy project at the Annual Nevada Junior Farm Bureau camp at Lake Tahoe, the calf this year was won by fifteen-year-old Donald Chapman, who lives in the Union district in the Newlands project near Fallon.

Last week young Chapman received the calf from Ernest Brooks, Rewana farm manager with his father proudly looking on, and took it to the home ranch in Churchill county, where it will eventually strengthen the Chapman dairy herd.

The prize calf, born only a couple of weeks ago, bears the impressive name of Rewana Sir Alcartra Hello, which indicates its distinguished ancestry.

Sired by Colony Ianthe Sir Hello, the calf's dam is Rewana Lady Alcartra Guide, which has reached the high production of 14,823 pounds of milk without the feeding of grain and on a twice-a-day milking.

His grandsire is equally distinguished as a producer, the average of 78 daughters being 15,456 pounds in annual milk production and 525 pounds of butterfat.

club work for five years, devoting his time to learning the ins and outs of dairying as a member of the "Unioneer" 4-H Calf Club.

In the fifteen years the Rewana farms have been presenting Holstein bull calves to the best among the young 4-H dairymen, blooded stock has gone into the dairy herds in practically every agricultural county in the state.

"These fine animals have been an important factor in building up high producing dairy herds in the state." Thomas Buckman, assistant director of the University of Nevada Agricultural Extension Service, sponsors 4-H club work, said this week as young Chapman took delivery of his prize calf. Buckman is also director of the Junior Farm Bureau camps.

Modernized Bathroom

The two pictures of the bathroom above offer a vivid contrast between a modern bath and one of only a slightly earlier period. In the modernized room extensive use has been made of built-in equipment. The walls have been tiled and all wood fixtures and trim supplanted. Funds to modernize bathrooms may be obtained under the Property Improvement Credit Plan of the Federal Housing Administration.
