Mrs. Yelland, first gold star mother of this country, was presented with a bouquet of flowers during the services and Mr. Yelland with a boutonniere.

James P. Smith of Ruth, was the principal speaker at the services, giving an excellent address, and the services were presided over by Commander Donald Urquhart. The program included vocal trio, Lois Shellenberger, Elaine Gray, and June Peterson, "End of a Perfect Day;" reading, Evangeline Jensen, "The Mother's Answer;" vocal solo, Miss Zina Harrison, "Where My Caravan Has Rested," and vocal solo, C. Raymond Carter, "Sleep Soldier Boy, Sleep."

Lieutenant Governor Maurice J. Sullivan was the principal speaker at the joint banquet meeting Saturday night at the Hotel Nevada. He traced the part the state of Nevada has taken in national affairs, stating it aided the cause of the Union in the civil war by standing for freedom of the slaves and poured mineral wealth into the national government in time of need during the Civil war.

Nevada men were the first to enlist in the Spanish American war, he stated, and in the World war led the states in the percentage of men enlisted.

Urging jobs for veterans, not pensions, Harry Z. Guerin of Reno, veterans representative for United States Employment Service, made one of the major speeches at the encampment meetings.

Guerin stated that the problem of employment as it affects veterans is not only the scarcity of jobs but an even greater problem, that of age discrimination. The public must be educated to hire men over 40 years, this group including most veterans, for men of that age are not through and must be made to earn decent living if democracy is to live.

The speaker urged the cooperation to the fullest extent of members in campaigning for jobs for veterans, and stated that the United States Employment Service and the Nevada State Employment Service stands ready to assist the veteran in every way possible in obtaining work, but that these services must first receive orders for workers. Jobs must first be created for veterans.
