DIPLOMATS ARE TALKATIVE

By J. E. Jones
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20—For those of us who live close to the seat of Government there is nothing alarming in the statements and documents of the Nazi White Book, which dug up last year's accounts of conversations, by Ambassadors Bullitt and Kennedy. These diplomats talked with other European diplomats and they likely didn't concentrate on the weather, or ladies hats. As a matter of fact, diplomats are in the habit of talking straight-from-the-shoulder to one another. These conversations may be more or less explanatory, but whatever their purpose they are "off the record." And the world knows that the sympathies of the people of the United States are on the side of the Allies.

The Nazis know that Bullitt, Kennedy, et al, did not and could not commit the U. S. Government to enter the European war on the side of the Allies. Besides, one only needs to stop and think about it, to realize that Summer Wells recently went to Europe as the personal representative of the President in order to find out from Hitler, Mussolini, Chamberlain, and the French Premier and others the secret truths behind this war. Those talkative diplomats all talked by the hour with Wells and the latter found out what those fellows had "up their sleeves."

The facts are, as President Roosevelt said a few days ago, that "Propaganda emanating from Europe now should be taken with a grain of salt, or preferably two, or three grains." That seems to skip the issue as to whether any documents in the White Book were forgeries.

U. P. Boosting Dude Ranches

The rapid expansion of the Dude Ranch industry in western states and the evident anticipation by "Dude Wranglers" of greatly increased patronage this season is indicated in the 1940 edition of "Dude Ranches Out West", a beautifully printed and illustrated book recently issued by the Union Pacific railroad.

"Last Year's Book," said W. S. Basinger, general passenger traffic manager, "contained detailed information on seventy-five dude ranches in Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Colorado, Nevada, and California, as well as in Jackson Hole, Wind River and Green River, Continental Divide and Snowy Range, which is all in Wyoming."

"But this year," he continued, "it was necessary to greatly enlarge the book so that complete information could be given concerning 102 dude ranches now operating in the same territory. The growth in number is convincing evidence that dude ranch vacationing is not only mounting in popularity, but that 'dude wranglers,' or operators, expect this to be their greatest year."

Included in the new ranches are several which are available to guests the year around, these ranches already being famous for their patronage by movie colonies. The book also gives full facts about twenty-three other full camps, resorts, lodges and inns distinguished from regular dude ranches, and a big game hunter's directory which lists fifty-four ranches, outfitters and locations in the west's vast primitive areas where big game abound.

A safe precaution when dealing with the Hitler.

There's nothing to get excited about; nothing to create a Congressional investigation performance—no matter how much documentary, or other "proof" there is about this diplomatic gab-fest. All the United States has to be concerned about is the maintaining of absolute neutrality that is strong enough in every joint to keep us out of the European War.

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

The very latest is to investigate the SEC. SEC is the Security Exchange Commission. It is one of the bureaus that was gonna make it safe to invest. And they have done so. They have made it so safe and sure that there is nothing left to invest in except a horse-race. And I just been reading about Santa Anita, a race-track in California, and boy, is money changing hands there.

But betting on a horse-race where you have one chance maybe in a hundred, and you can lose your shirt on either the favorite or a long-shot, it is O. K. with the Govt.

There is no SEC on horse-races, but if you have a share of stock in an electric company the SEC will show up and make a rule that it is a holding company and undesirable and should be eliminated. You, also, are eliminated.

But the SEC is getting so many of its friends into the holding companies, to run them as a Receiver, that you cannot tell who is holding the company.

Congress is getting suspicious. The horse is gone, so it is time to investigate.

Yours with the low down, JO SIERRA.

COURTEOUS DRIVERS
Courteous drivers are usually safe drivers, points out the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. By yielding the right of way at intersections when approaching traffic makes it dangerous to proceed, many motorists avoid accidents.
