I AM THE KILOWATT-HOUR

By W. A. Stansfield, W.M., K.T., 32' (Scottish Rite News Bulletin)

I serve all people equally well, be their respective race, creed, or nationality what it may. I am always ready to serve from dawn to dawn, from noon to noon, from midnight to midnight, all hours of the clock. I can even operate clocks to maintain correct time readings.

I can cool and condition the air you breathe, the atmosphere in which you attend your daily tasks or pleasures.

I can cool the water you drink or your favorite beverage or soda; I can heat the water for your bath and water for your daily dish-washing.

I can attend your neat and tidy personal appearance, for I can wash your clothes, and I can provide the heat required by the iron to press your clothes.

I can "man the pumps" to irrigate your farm, and I can operate the equipment that you use to prepare your "products of the soil" for their respective markets.

I can operate the railways to provide you with safe, dependable, rapid transportation, whether the distance be short of great, whether the route be over level ground or upgrade.

I provide you with amusements, recreation, entertainment and even education; the movie, the radio, and night games of all sorts. Each day millions of careful motorists observe and obey my stop-and-go instructions at the traffic intersections.

I am the life blood of tall buildings. I operate the passenger and freight elevators.

I am of unlimited value when you are sick or injured. I operate the X-ray machine.

By means of refrigeration, I can preserve your food indefinitely and in excellent condition; by means of heat, I can so cook this same food that it is exceptionally palatable when it reaches your dining table.

I am the one you call on when you wish to read or study. I operate the printing machine, and I provide you with correct lighting.

I am that "irresistible force," to which Mother Nature will respond and yield for you a plentiful supply of the most precious metals, and these, of a quality which no other manner, means, or proceed-ure has yet surpassed.

I am known and used throughout all lands, all portions of the globe—North, South, East and West. Requests for me are answered promptly during each season of the year—Summer, Fall, Winter and Spring.

There is no task too small, there is no task too great, whether it be in the home, on the farm, in the business world or in industry, but what I can and do render the same good, silent, faithful service, always.

I am your most respectful servant, the Kilowatt-Hour.
