The rocky points around Overton seem to be deserted on Saturday nights since the crappie season started. In previous years the rocky points across from Fish Island were lit up like the Strip on Saturday nights. The word is out that the crappies are not biting at Overton this year. Well, yours truly can contradict that, because I ventured up there about four times this winter and on each trip caught enough fish to give the neighbors some.

Some of you might know by now that the rocky points across from Fish Island are far above water level, so, in order to catch the crappie at Overton, we have to move down to the salt mine and fish the point about one hundred feet out. If the minnows come in you should catch a box of those big shad crappie and also catch your limit of small bass on crappie minnows. Each trip to Overton I caught one of two nice cats (over six lbs.). So it isn't true that Big Bosie caught all the big cats at Overton before he moved to new fishing waters in Grand Wash. You have often heard of how dumb a catfish is, well this may be true in Louisiana and some other waters, but not so in Lake Mead. In order to catch the big ones you have to cast quite a distance from the boat and ease the tension on your line. If he feels too much resistance he refuses to take the bait.

"A LITTLE PREJUDICE" limited human minds cannot understand the tragedy of losing four, or three, or two, or even one life... then we are indeed lost, and our essential humanity will be gone.

A most telling expression of this thought is credited to Julia Ward Howe, who was talking to Senator Charles Sumner of Massachusetts one day, and begged him to help a certain individual. The Senator replied, "Julia, I have become so busy, I can no longer concern myself with individuals."

Miss Howe answered, "Charles, that is quite remarkable. Even God has not reached that point yet."

Zora Folley, coming off of his one-handed victory over Canadian Strong Man, George Chuvala last Friday at Cleveland, has re-entered his candidacy for a shot at Liston's title. Folley, Arizona fighter-politician, put on one of his trademarks, over-cautious fights. He used a jarring left jab almost exclusively, even though most of the night Chuvala was inviting right hand shots to his jaw, by keeping his left hand so low, that he appeared to be trying to catch Zora by the ankle.

There is no question that Folley has an excellent right which is capable of decking any heavyweight, including Chuvala, who has never been put on the canvas in his whole career. Zora, refusing to risk a right hand lead to the Canadian's unprotected chin, might just as well have left his right hand back in Chandler, Arizona, except that it served him as something of a catcher's mitt in protecting his head from George's lethal hooks from out of left field. Folley was just too timid to risk catching one of Chuvala's lefts, so he held his right hand close to his vulnerable chin for the entire ten rounds, excepting those few times when he let it fly automatically as a counter punch.

Chuvala was able, at times, to force through Folley's guard, and drive the Arizonian into the ropes, where he had his best success of the evening in close. Chuvala was also able to stick Zora with his left jab on those few occasions that he tried.

The whole story of that fight was Zora Folley sticking Chuvala with a sharp left jab which carried enough power to keep Chuvala from getting set for his bull-like rushing attacks. "I am certain that Folley is not foolhardy enough to think that such a plan of attack would be successful against Sonny 'The Bear', Liston. The Bear has the very best, as well as most damaging, left jab in the business. He has that same secret weapon, that helped make The Brown Bomber so ominous in the squared circle.

Folley has had one encounter with the present King of the ring. In that fight, in the third round, they brought Zora's stool out of his corner to him, after hams, which hang at the ends of his gorilla arms, where hands are supposed to be located.

If Zora could not avoid Chuvala's left jab, he would find his head in the lap of a ringsider seated in the tenth or eleventh row after catching one of Sonny's jabs. If Zora could not defend against some of the rushes that George Chuvala made, he would fare much better in holding off a General Sherman Tank, than he would in defending against Lethal Liston when he lowers the boom.

Sonny Liston finds himself in the position of a King with no subjects to rule. The Champion has no logical opponents to challenge his rule. Liston could possibly do something about this situation if he would sign to fight the top two heavyweights on the same card. It would, however, be more of an even match if he would face the two of them at the same time.

The Brown Bomber and The Bear — Sonny Liston works-out daily at the Thunderbird Hotel under the watchful eye of Joe Louis. Sonny plans to button the Lip of Louisville on February 25, at Miami, Florida.

TEN POINT POLICY

- 7) The Voice shall attempt to clear the atmosphere of the stench produced by the political prostitutes.
- 8) The Voice shall be guided only by facts, and by logic, never by coercion, nor by emotions, nor by sentiment.
- 9) The Voice shall offer its total facilities to the NAACP, as well as to other organizations, with established integrity, that are striving for equal rights for all citizens.
- 10) The Voice shall employ its total potential to guide our youth, and prepare them for tomorrow's leadership.

The Las Vegas Voice has adopted the slogan, "Nevada shall lead the way for a better USA." We believe that Las Vegas will become the model city, and that Nevada will be the first impeccably democratic State in the Nation. We pledge ourselves to this end.
