LEND A HAND TO THE HAND THAT HELPS!

This paper belongs to you, the readers. It was created solely for the purpose of helping the people. The Voice is YOUR PAPER. If you have found interest or pleasure in the Voice, and if you wish to see your paper become a permanent part of your community, lend a hand to the Voice so that it can serve you as no other medium has ever done in the past. We have made a solemn pledge that this paper will always belong to the people and will be YOUR VOICE.

We, the publishers, do not make this instrument of public service possible. The advertisers actually pay the freight, and send the Voice to the readers.

We ask you to support the people and the business places that advertise in YOUR PAPER. When you support them, they will continue to support YOUR PAPER, and we will be able to provide you with a much needed public service.

WHEN YOU GO SHOPPING, TAKE YOUR PAPER ALONG WITH YOU. LET THE ADVERTISERS SEE THE VOICE. LEND A HAND TO THE HAND THAT HELPS!!

the vivid, intense type or a career woman, or a chic city-dweller, a richer, deeper fragrance. Try the samples available at the perfume counter of your favorite store to decide on a perfume before making the investment. Don't run wild, because the more you sample the less you'll be able to tell them apart. Ideally try only two, one on the inside of each wrist; then resolutely leave and plan to come back another day for more tests. The reason for delaying your decision to buy is that scents change. Never apply perfume on clothing, oil on the skin. Don't concentrate it on one spot; apply dabs to a variety of places of your body such as temples, wrists, base of throat, brows, eyelids, palms of hands, and back of the knees. One important thought. NEVER overdo it with too much perfume! The scent can be most uncomfortable to those around you.

FRACTURED and FRAIL

Mary had a Cadillac car,
And liked it very well.
She ran it into a telephone pole,
And now it looks like wreckage.

Equality is a wonderful dream,
But now and then I awaken and scream,
Togetherness and unity is what we need,
Then equality will be indeed.

distance. I get the feeling that the Bear wants to play cat and mouse with the lip. He is probably planning to stuff enough leather into Clay's big mouth, to quiet that chatter box for a long, long time. I think that Liston plans to give Gaseous Cassius a long evening of seeing and feeling the wrath of his fistic prowess by punishing the poetic one for several rounds before he puts over the crusher.

Liston, however, overlooks one important fact to carry out such strategy. The very first left jab he sticks in Clay's big mouth, is likely to deposit his head among the ringsiders. The force of the Bear's left jab, with that ham-sized fist of his, is enough to cave in the side of a house. His hooks and right crosses would even tear up the concrete foundation of that house. This man stands so far above all competition that they should match him with two fighters simultaneously, or match him with a full grown mean gorilla. No one except the old man with the sythe will reduce the present King to size. King Sonny is trained by Willie Reddish, who once was among the best of the world heavyweights. Willie would have travelled the ladder of fighter glory, all the way to the top, if he had ever got the right breaks. He has developed Liston's potentials and has moulded him into the position he might have held himself, had he had the proper management a quarter century ago.

Great fighter that he is, a part of Liston's fistic fury is owed to the training directed by Willie Reddish. In addition to Reddish, Liston has a pretty fair old soldier of the squared circle, who watches his every move, and points out whatever flaws he sees. That old warrior of yesteryear is the legendary Brown Bomber, Joe Louis.

What chances does poor Cassius have when he has to face the Bear and the Bomber at the same time? He will have consolation in the knowledge his prostate body from the arena.
