

IT IS ONE HOUR to deadline and I have not one thought in my bearded head which is not unusual. However, this fact is disturbing when it is one hour to deadline. I am wrong. There is one thought in my head: That there is one hour to deadline.

- I think I shall think "political".
- Thought One: It seems perfectly logical that a candidate will spend twelve thousand dollars to get elected to a post that pays five thousand dollars a year for two to four years! In Louisiana, in 1960, the two gubernatorial candidates, Davis and Morrison, spent better than one million dollars to win state positions that would pay an aggregate of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars during the four year terms in office. What patriots they were!
- Thought Two: Were elections invented by printers, sign painters and manufacturers of novelties? What happens to all those signs of the losers the day after? (Should be thoughts Two A and Two B.)
- Thought Three: Would you be surprised if the Republican aspirant, and three of the Democratic aspirants for the same post in the primary were receiving their funds from the same source (in Texas)? I wouldn't.
- Thought Four: Next week's column better be a good one because I have been taking my ease these two weeks past.
- Thought Six: What in the hell was thought Five?
- Thought Seven: Next week. . .

UPSTATERS BOLT BARRY, PAUL

RENO--Two Negro delegates to the 1964 Republican state convention at Lake Tahoe have announced they would not support the candidacies of Sen. Barry Goldwater or Lt. Gov. Paul Laxalt in bids for the Presidency and the U.S. Senate this fall.

William B. Bailey of Reno and Ulysses Woodard of Sparks both indicated they would not desert the GOP despite their opposition to Goldwater and Laxalt.

BAILEY said he opposed the Arizona senator's quest for the Presidency because "the elements pushing him are not people devoted to the American democratic way of life."

He added he would not support Laxalt's bid for a U.S. Senate seat from Nevada because of his stand on civil rights and his support of Goldwater.

When contacted, Laxalt said he had no comment at this time.

Speaking of Goldwater, Bailey asserted, "I'm going to have to work for the other party, whom-ever they run. I just can't go for Goldwater unless he makes a radical change by November."

Both Bailey and Woodard said they would not bolt the Republican Party. Laxalt has been a leading Goldwater supporter in Nevada.

WOODARD, a Republican for the past 20 years, declared "I'm anti-Goldwater not only because of his civil rights stand. It's his foreign policy and his stand on social legislation. His philosophy is far too different from my own."

In regard to Laxalt, Woodard stated, "I supported him two years ago and I think I delivered quite well for him. But I will not support him now even though I am a Republican and am going to stay a Republican."

Woodard explained he felt Laxalt "supports the Goldwater thinking and I do not want the Goldwater thinking furthered any more in Nevada."

DELINQUENCY EXPERTS OFFER FREE LECTURES

TWO NOTED AUTHORITIES in the field of juvenile delinquency will speak here next week at a lecture program sponsored by the Southern Regional Division of the University of Nevada.

Dr. Richard Evans of the department of psychology at the University of Houston and Dr. John Hurley, clinical psychologist and professor at Michigan State University will discuss, "The Psychological and Social Causes of Juvenile Delinquency," at 8 p.m., Wednesday, August 12 in the Southern Nevada University gymnasium.

Dr. Irving Katz, associate professor of psychology at the Las Vegas campus, arranged the free, public lecture program.

The role of family life, character development, the community, churches and schools in helping to prevent juvenile delinquency will be discussed by Dr. Hurley.

A graduate of the University of Iowa, Dr. Hurley worked at the Los Angeles County Juvenile Hall before joining the faculty at Michigan State University. He will teach a workshop course at Southern Nevada University beginning Aug. 3. The two-week course is offered for parents and teachers, according to Dr. Katz.

Dr. Evans' course, which will be offered at the same time, will be devoted to some of the broader aspects of the problem of juvenile delinquency including environment, civil rights, unemployment, mobility of the population, etc.

This summer session course will be directed toward social workers and teachers. Registration for the two workshops is scheduled, today, July 30 and tomorrow.

Dr. Evans has done much research on juvenile delinquency. He was awarded a doctorate degree at Michigan State and was named director of the Greater Houston Action for Youth Project. In addition, he has produced six films on the problem of juvenile delinquency.

Elks Head Lauds Leaders

GRAND EXALTED RULER Hobson R. Reynolds of the I.B.P.O. Elks of the World has notified the 450,000 members of the world's largest dues paying organization that in hailing the passage of the Civil Rights Bill, he pays special tribute to the leaders in Congress who worked so hard to push it through.

Reynolds said that every title in the bill was of particular significance, not only to Negroes and other minority groups, but to America herself and the entire world.

Speaking in behalf of the entire Elk membership, Reynolds directed special salutes to the late President, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, who first presented the bill to Congress back in 1963; President Lyndon B. Johnson for espousing the bill in its original form; and Congressional leaders Senator Everett Dirksen, Senator Michael J. Mansfield, Senator Hubert Humphrey, and Representative Charles Halleck and Representative John W. McCormack, who successfully piloted the bill through the Congress of the United States.

Reynolds implored the entire Elk membership to be ever alert to detecting non-compliance with the provisions of the bill, and at the same time, to exercise their constitutional rights and register and vote so as to secure full implementation of the bill.
