

NEGRO ATTORNEY CHIEF "DA" AIDE IN LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES--A Negro janitor's son who became one of the nation's most successful criminal lawyers has been named No. 2 man on the Los Angeles County district attorney's staff.

In announcing the appointment of Earl C. Broady, 59, as his chief deputy, Dist. Atty. Evelle J. Younger said, "Mr. Broady is one of those rare individuals who has the respect and confidence of both law enforcement officials and defense attorneys--and that takes some doing."

When he assumes his new duties on Jan. 1, Broady will be the first of his race to attain such a high rank in the local district attorney's office, largest in the United States.

Before selecting Broady as his top aide, Younger said he spent weeks discussing candidates for the job with "community leaders, law enforcement officials and district attorney's personnel." On the basis of these talks, he said he decided on Broady, a former police lieutenant who studied law at night as he worked his way up on the Los Angeles force.

Younger said he expected Broady to "improve communications in this office in some (See BROADY, page 13)
