ing, ethnic distribution, free zoning, transportation, finances and the neighborhood school policy concept."

MANY COMMUNITIES have been "torn apart" in attempting to solve these problems with emergency or so-called "simple solutions" according to Sewell.

"There are no simple solutions," he said. "It will take the combined intelligence, patience, good will and diligent study of the 'best' people in our community to find long-range answers to these problems so that all our children will benefit from educational policies established by elected officials. That is why we have formed this planning council."

It was expected that the council would require at least six months to properly research the many problems facing local school authorities before making specific recommendations to the district board. Chairman Jones said the second of several orientation meetings would be held in early July. A brief preliminary meeting was conducted on May 26.
