significant development in the field of workmen's compensation since World War II. This involves the restoration of a handicapped claimant to usefulness in all phases of his life--physical, mental, social, vocational and economic. To be fully effective, a rehabilitation program includes both medical and vocational restoration.

conquer self. Unfortunately many people have never won this battle. They wage a losing fight for self-control till their dying day.

Jesus could have drifted with the stream. He could have bowed to the trend of the times, and made a compromise with the Temple priests. But if He had, He could not have been our Saviour. Christ won His battle over sin because He first won the battle over self.

Do you face a conflict within? It may be some secret conflict that no one else in the world knows anything about, not even your closest relative. It may involve some secret sin. It may be a haunting fear. It may be a knowledge that God is calling you to some special work.

I cannot give you any advice, or rules, on how to solve this conflict with self, except to point to the example of Christ. Seek God's Will; disregard all other considerations, except that of pleasing God. For, as the Psalmist has said, "The Lord imparts His secrets to the pious."

joint effort to prevent duplication and, at the same time, provide training in a new field of occupation by trained personnel who are devoting full time to vocational rehabilitation.

Many of us take little notice of workmen's compensation, but sooner or later it affects most of us. Businessmen are cognizant of its costs, for they pay for its operation, and the cost of work injuries is considered part of the cost of production.

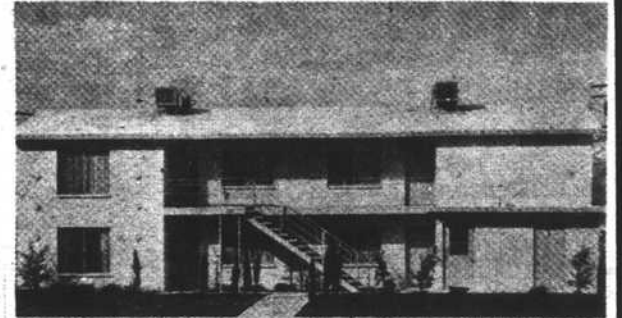

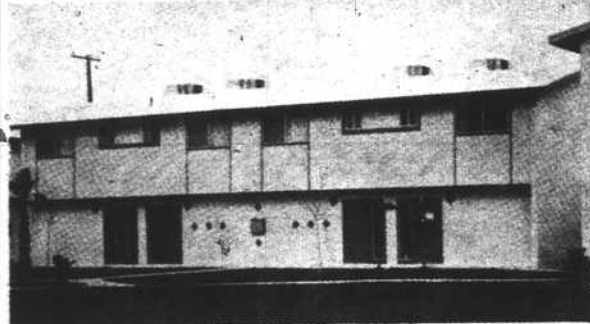

The working man usually has contact with the NIC either for medical treatment for a minor injury, or for compensation, medical care and a disability award resulting from a serious accident.

The sudden increase in our working force, accompanied by a general industrialization throughout the state, has given workmen's compensation and its safety program foremost importance.
