Neither Honor Nor Sense

SOME THIEVES STOLE THINGS in 1965 that add up to positive proof that thieves have no honor. In many reported cases the thieves appeared, not only to have no honor, but no sense to match.

In Klamath Falls, Oregon a thief who was either very bold, or very stupid, stole the paddy wagon. However, he was challenged to the "bold or stupid" title by a "klepto" in Auburn, New York who made off with a steamroller which had the amazing speed of 5 m.p.h.

A tree was stolen in Ballston, Spa, New York. The gendarmes caught the culprit red-handed when they found the tree in the thief's bathtub--full of water yet. A Georgia thief lifted three Oak trees from an Atlanta residence.

In Whittier, California a group of day-light bandits stole a lawn while they chatted with the neighbors.

Someone snatched the whole front porch from a house in Norfolk, Virginia.

Three amateur burglars in San Pablo, California got off to a very bad start in their careers. They set off the burglar alarm, one fell through the roof of the building, and another got stuck in a ventilator shaft. The latter had an unknown partner in crime in Waycross, Georgia. The Georgia guy got stuck in a chimney and the local gendarmes had to free him so that they could lock him up.

There was another entry in the "hard-luck-for-thieves" contest. In Baton Rouge, Louisiana a burglar got into the hospital and was apprehended while pilfering pills and band-aids. He jumped through the window and wound up back in the hospital, as a patient in shackles.

In London, a thief stole all the phonograph records entitled "Thou Shall Not Steal," while in Los Angeles a thief pinched the burglar alarm from the home of some unsuspecting citizen. A snatch-thief grabbed the wig off the head of an embarrassed female in a Kansas City cafe.

A pair of burglars promptly jumped through a window in Atlanta when they were greeted by a gruff and guttural, "What d'ya'll want?" The voice belonged to a Mynah bird.

It all boils down to a point that stealing is for the birds.

Hear! Hear!

Committee work becomes less sweet
 When someone squawks about his seat,
 We'd like to mention it's a task
 To please you all as you ask,
 We pray for the day when some inventor
 Will plan a ballroom, all dead-center
 In short, a room so well designed
 All seats in front and none behind.

Again you've asked to sit with pals
 To find you're nowhere near the gals
 But please believe we've tried
 To keep you all well satisfied,
 So if you feel there's something lacking
 Please don't start your pistol-packing,
 We've tried to do our very best
 To please you--(OUR HONORED GUEST).
