

Stranger In Town

John P. West

SINCE IT IS NOT practically possible, at the moment, I would like everybody (figuratively speaking) to walk up and shake hands with my new "podner" Steve Halle.

Steve is quite a guy--To really dig him and enjoy him, though, you really should meet Steve as I did, without benefit of introduction by a mutual friend, or even a mutual stranger. This cat just walked up to me and said I'm Steve Halle with Hiram Walkers and 24 hours later he was the chum of my childhood, the buddy of my boyhood, and the Fraternity brother of my College days despite the fact Mr. Halle is my senior by a decade and a half.

Steve Halle came to town on a business trip for the Firm by which he is employed, Hiram Walker Incorporated. Despite the fact that Steve had flown to Nellis AFB innumerable times and fairly often as a Reserve Officer in the California National Guard, he had never before visited our town.

A MUTUAL FRIEND of his and my Dad's had told him to look up the "West's". He did, and I feel I owe a debt of gratitude to Eddie Atkinson, in Los Angeles, for sending him to the family.

Here is one of our Negro men who is right on top of his job; a credit to his Firm; a credit to his Race; and most importantly, a credit to Himself. All of us who met him here, frankly had a ball entertaining him on his trip to Las Vegas; it probably would be more accurate to say that we had a ball while he entertained us.

Impressed? Yes, I was impressed with him and proud that I could identify myself with one of the new breed of young Negro men who are "making it" in the competitive business field, and making it strictly on their own merit. I don't have any illusion that I have made an equal mark in the jungle, but since I am a younger man than he, I am proud to say that he made a profound impression on me. Like we say in my circle, "I dug the cat", and you can tell that I'm confident and happy that he also "dug" me.
