

We've Been WONDERING

WHY that glad hand, welcome to our town, professional mooch limped away from our newly-arrived medico, Doc Long John, mumbling to himself? He asked the good Doc "What should one do for a sprained ankle," and Doc replied, "Limp".

WHY Mr. Webster's definition of a financial wizard is a very skillful or clever person in the handling of money, when in reality he's a fellow who has discovered the magic means of making more money than his family spends.

WHY that ancient age broad who keeps hen-pecked husband in the doghouse most of the time doesn't KEEP her un-wanted, frog-shaped carcass out of that certain bachelor's workshop (Dear Editor: A carcass is something dead, ain't it?)

WHY that certain half-pint bartender who answers to the name "Big Shorty" claims to be such a big operator at home? He didn't tell what he operates--like the washing machine, the vacuum sweeper, and especially the lawn mower.

WHY Loverboy got so miffed at the pretty miss when she gifted him with a goodly supply of penicillin on his birthday? (What better could she give the guy who has everything).

WHY somebody doesn't buzz Miss Poppie Mae that she is heading for Ulcerville? She can't create while she is blowing her stack in criticizing the competition.

WHY the sequences of 1-2-14-18-22-29-33-42 and 54-55-57-59-61-62-63-64 are supposed to be lucky for persons born in October, November and December.

WHY the zillion salesmen, who are presently roaming the Westside streets, are all from the "other side of the tracks". The next time one comes to your door, tell him to go back to his boss and give the boss a message, "Send a Soul Brother and then I'll listen to the pitch".

WHY that certain "gray" (go-go girl chasing) gent just can't get over losing that cute beige doll (that never was really his in the first place) to Dark Gable? Some guys try to defy age by believing they are as good as they never were.

WHY that same old hoary bunch of political prostitutes (that most are hep to) believe that "Soul People" ARE a bunch of gullible sheep? They are actually trying to convince us that the bigot they are being paid to stump for is the man for us. (Last time out they tried to give us Bilgewater. They'd stump for Satan if the price was right).

WHY that cute bronze doll who was recently dubbed "FINGER LICKING GOOD" doesn't make like fast to an optometrist. From what we hear, she is so near-sighted that she can't recognize her friends until they are right on top of her.

WHY love and three rings go together, like engagement RING, wedding RING, and suffering.

WHY the easiest way to drive wives crazy is to have a grin on your face while sleeping.

WHY that wearer of the cloth always turns his collar around bass ackward when he makes his creeps to save that sister's soul?

WHY more people don't mind their own business? If more people did mind THEIR business, it would, in time, create more businesses into which other people could stick their noses.

(HISTORY, from page 2)

back the way he had come or be annihilated.

"He said to his men, 'These Africans are but the resemblances, nay, rather, the shadows of men, being worn-out with hunger, cold, dirt, and filth, and bruised and enfeebled among stones and rocks. Their joints are frost-bitten; their sinews stiffened with the snow; their limbs withered by the frost; their armour battered and shivered; their horses, lame and powerless. With such cavalry, with such infantry you will have to fight; indeed you will not have enemies in reality, but rather their last remains.'

'Moreover, we have beaten these miserable Carthaginians by land and sea often before. Now they have had the temerity to cross the Alps. But they won't be strong enough to return over it. We have them in a trap. What I do fear is that victory is going to be so cheap that the world is not going to give us credit for it.'

"And Hannibal was in a really desperate position. Courage and initiative were his sole hopes. Assembling his men, he told them that he had promised to lead them to plunder such as no army had ever seen before and that it was now up to them to seize it or die in the attempt.

"To impress them with the critical nature of their position, he dramatized in the following manner: He had the enemy prisoners taken in the Alps brought before his men and throwing down before the captives the weapons with which they usually fought, he said to them, 'Each of you who is willing to fight a duel to the death with one of his own tribe let it be known. The winners will be set free and given horses, arms and money to take them to their homes again in honor.'

"Every captive volunteered. Friend turned against friend until he slew him or was slain. Hannibal, true to his word, rewarded the victors.

"To his men, he said, 'You are like these captives, shut in on every side. Behind you are the Alps; before you, the Romans and the river. Your only hope is battle and victory.'

"And victory will not be difficult. Think of the splendid and prosperous career before you. It will conduct you to Rome, second in wealth only to Carthage. There are great treasures to be divided amongst us, if we win. If we lose we are lost, for there is no place of safety we can reach by flight. We must win."

Next week, the last in a series on Hannibal will tell of the incredible victory, over the Romans, and of the great warriors' subsequent (and equally incredible) military feats.

EDITOR'S MAILBOX

Dear Sir:

I would like to take this opportunity to let you know how much I enjoy your paper, especially the FOOD FORUM, written by Dorothy Johnson. I have tried several of the recipes in her column and they are marvelous. They have become a part of my regular recipes.

Again, thanks for remembering the "cooks" and I will be looking forward to seeing more of Dorothy's delicious recipes.

Sincerely, Mrs. J. W. Watson.

Dear Mrs. Watson:

We couldn't agree with you more about those recipes of Dorothy Johnson's. We would like to add that Mrs. Johnson's knowledge of the Culinary Art is not just academic; she is a great cook and a marvelous and imaginative catress.

ANSWER TO AN UNPRINTED LETTER

Dear Mrs. Grayson:

Yours is not the only complaint the VOICE has received about "spoiled meat being sold" at a Westside neighborhood market. It is not only "not fair" for butchers to sell spoiled meat --it is against the interests of public health, moreover, it is against the law. However, the proper place to lodge this type of complaint is with the Clark County Health Department, 615 Shadow Lane--telephone 385-1291.
