Jurist Agrees Court Hit NAACP Damaging Blow A member of the U.S. Supreme Court has charged that a court decision upholding damages against the NAACP could be used to wipe out the civil rights organization.

The court, in a 5-4 decision, had ruled that the NAACP can be held liable for picketing of a grocer ordered by its Savannah branch.

THE DECISION was vigorously attacked by Justice William O. Douglas, who said it is the kind of judgment that could ultimately destroy the NAACP and other "unpopular groups." Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Abe Fortas joined Douglas in voting to reverse the damage judgment.

Justice Douglas noted that the NAACP's views are "anathema" in some parts of the country and under "vague" Georgia laws, the organization could be held accountable for almost anything its branch does.

"The rights of political association are frag-ile enough without adding the additional threat of destruction by lawsuit," he said.

"'Unpopular groups like the NAACP," he warned, "will receive crushing verdicts from emotional juries,"

The five justice majority--Hugo L. Black, Tom C. Clark, John M. Harlan, Potter Stewart, and Byron R. White upheld $85,793.05 in damages which the NAACP's national organization, its Savannah branch, and two branch officers were ordered to pay Haldred Overstreet, a white grocer.

The court rejected an NAACP appeal in a nine-word order: "The writ of certiorari is dismissed as improvidently granted.'
