Popular Solution

STOCKHOLM--(NPI)--How does a school system operate when its 20,000 teachers are locked out? Local school officials came up with a good answer -- let the students teach themselves. Even officials of the teachers union admit that 15-year-old students have been far more effective in teaching than expected--possibly more successful than some teachers. The state locked the teachers out after they demanded a 20 per cent pay raise.

It's Tough All Over

NEW YORK--(NPI)--White college students' interest in the rights movement is waning as a result of Viet Nam pressure and "crow-jim," rights leaders have reported. SNCC and CORE have lost many of their white supporters on campus because they are no longer wanted -- in leadership positions, anyway. "Students don't see what role they can play in the South and in civil rights since SNCC made it clear they don't want white students working in the black community," said Ron Carver, chairman of "Friends of Snick."
