

Hostess's Report Of Atlanta Trip At Sunday's Tea

Mrs. Mable Hoggard, Highland School first grade teacher to whom teaching is both vocation and avocation, returned from Atlanta, Georgia where she attended the inauguration of Dr. Hugh Morris Gloster as Seventh President of Morehouse College aglow from the experience... Here she is pictured with Dr. Gloster, who is a cousin of her husband, J. David Hoggard, at the Delegates Luncheon which preceded the Inaugural Ceremony and which Mrs. Hoggard describes as an unbelievable combination of superb food, decorative splendor, and warm hospitality.

Mrs. Hoggard and Mrs. Gloster are pictured in the elegant home of Glosters where Mable was a house guest... Décor of the home is tastefully designed as a setting for lovely oriental momentos of the Glosters' stay in Japan... Mrs. Hoggard was greatly impressed with the progressiveness of Atlantans culturally and economically, and her praise of the school district's forward educational strides is unstinting.

And of course her teacher's heart swelled with emotion at the picture of this young man undeterred by cerebral palsy in pursuing his studies as he confidently displays his ability to read and write.

With her great love for children, those who know Mable Hoggard understand her feelings when upon touring Atlanta schools, she visited this classroom which is especially equipped and activities are designed for these youngsters who are all victims of cerebral palsy.

Back from her glorious week's combination of holidaying and recruiting for our local school district, Mrs. Hoggard is happily at home in her own classroom where some of her pupils are shown here with Mrs. Jerry Furr, one of Mrs. Hoggard's aides from the Volunteers to Education Program.

On Sunday last, Mrs. Hoggard gave an "Appreciation Tea" at Zion Methodist Church for the aides whose volunteer work in the classrooms has proved to be an in-

DENIAL OF TEACHER'S LICENSE DENOUNCED

NEW YORK - (NPI)--A teacher who took his pupils to an off-limits Malcolm X memorial program has been denied his substitute teacher's license.

Schools Superintendent Dr. Bernard W. Donovan cancelled the license of John F. Hatchett, formerly at Public School 68 in Harlem, for "escorting children outside their school without authorization."

At issue was the students' attendance at a Malcolm X program at Intermediate School 201 in East Harlem.

In allowing the Malcolm X program to be held during school hours, Supt. Donovan had specified that no pupils from the I.S. 201 complex--which includes P.S. 68--were to be allowed to attend.

Leslie Campbell, a regular teacher at Junior High School 35 in the Bedford-Stuyvesant area, was also accused of taking his students to the program. Dr. Donovan transferred him to J.H.S. 271 in the Ocean Hill-Brownsville area.

The African-American Teachers Association denounced the superintendent's actions as "an educational lynching."
