Dick Gregory Talks On Colleges

Dick Gregory, comedian and political evangelist, spends nearly 90% of his time on college campuses. He appreciates the problems of both college officials and students.

In the August College issue of GLAMOUR Magazine, he answers the question, "What would you do if you were a college president?" Many of the problems, he feels, lie in the fact that college presidents are not free -- a private college president must answer to the board of directors; a state college president must answer to politicians.

Still No Day For Satchel

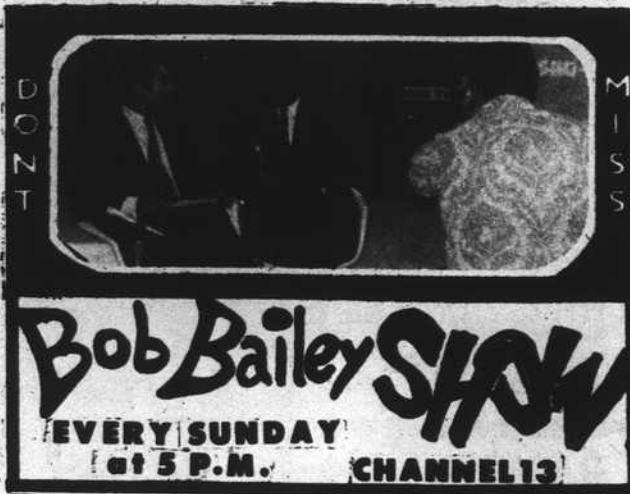

The Atlanta Braves still has not responded to a request by The Voice to assist in a "Day for Satchel Paige," despite some action by The Los Angeles Dodgers, and an assist by Herman Hill of Western Airlines.

Many sports fans have heard of Paige but few have ever seen him. A greater number have never witnessed him in action.

It was the opinion of The Voice, enough people would be interested in this rare feat, to arrange a trip to Los Angeles; a Dodger vs Braves game; and an appearance by Satchel, even if only for a stroll to the pitcher's mound.

Since the baseball season has reached its half-way mark, time is now of the greatest importance. Some fans have already written The Voice, in support of the idea, together with request for full information.

Other communications have been addressed to the Brave management to attempt a final effort at tying together the idea.
