WASHINGTON--About 400 women employees of the Wheaton Glass Co., Millville, N.Y., will receive up to five years retroactive back pay with interest after a Federal court found them underpaid because of sex discrimination. The Federal District Court in Camden,

Court Orders Back Wages Paid To 400 Women

LAS VEGAS VOICE

The Federal District Court in Camden, N. J., has ordered the company to compute and pay the women the difference between their wage and the wages the men had received for equal work since 1965.

The Equal Pay Act is enforced by the U.S. Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division. It provides that men and women working in the same establishment under similar conditions must receive the same pay for jobs requiring equal skill, effort and responsibility.

Wheaton had violated the Equal Pay Act of 1963 by paying women selector-packers 21 1/2 cents less per hour than men doing the same work.

The Circuit Court of Appeals rejected Wheaton's claim that jobs of men and women have to be identical to receive equal pay. It ruled last January that the women's work need only be "substantially equal." The U. S. Supreme Court later refused

The U. S. Supreme Court later refused Wheaton's petition to review the case. Originally, 230 present and former employees

Originally, 230 present and former employees were believed to be affected by the discrimination. At that time, liability was estimated at $250,000.

Since the Act became effective in 1964, $2 million in back wages have already been recovered and wage increases obtained for almost 8,000 employees without going to court.
