IT TAKES COLOR

They say black is beautiful
 And I agree, it's true
 Black is very beautiful
 And black is generally true blue.
 Why such fuss about people's skin
 Can you tell me, I pray?
 Black is very beautiful
 So is brown, and tan and gray.
 Can you imagine what
 This world would be
 If only white we could see.
 White trees, white flowers
 Only white just everywhere,
 It would be so deathly terrible
 The sight we could never bear.
 It takes color added to white
 To make the picture look right.
 The same applies to people's faces
 It takes color in all places,
 For balance in nature
 And to balance the races,
 We know that black is beautiful
 This I will agree,
 It takes all colors,
 Like you, and your and man.

HOW DIFFERENT

The world sees me as black
 And sees that you are white.
 Does that make you any
 Different from me? In fact
 We are the same in my sight
 I've seen many a suntanned white
 Much darker than blacks I know,
 Yet they are the first ones
 Their disdain of blacks to show.
 They lay in the sun
 Until they are brown,
 Then in their bras and shorts
 They parade all over town.
 Their skin is as brown as can be,
 So how are they different from me?

HOWERY HEARS THE PEOPLE

City Commissioner Wes Howery was the first public official with the courage to take a stand against the school board's integration plan.

He believes any man (black or white) who has chosen to live near a school he likes, is being cheated when he is ordered to send his children out of his neighborhood.

Many people agree with Wes. They have shown their distress by coming to Howery's campaign headquarters at West Charleston and Decatur to sign a petition to force the school board to reconsider.

Wes Howery sees forced busing as another instance of government failing to find out what the people want. As your City Commissioner, he has always put racial harmony and good education high on the list of problems you are trying to solve.
