ONE-DAY SEMINAR

A one-day seminar and "town hall meeting" to discuss busing and integration problems has been set for Saturday at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, Bob Bailey announced today.

The seminar sessions, open to parents of school age (grades 1-6) children of the community, will feature participation by school district officials, religious leaders, and representatives of the black and white communities, Bailey said.

"We must all work together to find a sound, fair, solution to this problem," Bailey said, "for if we don't, it is our children who will be the losers. It is not a time for hysteria, it is a time for logic and rationality and regardless of the things that have been said in the heat of anger by some people recently, we better all get together and try to help instead of hinder."

Bailey, a recent candidate for city commission, said he planned the seminar-town hall meeting for this time "to remove any political over-tones it might have had."

Morning and afternoon sessions have been scheduled for Saturday at UNLV, Bailey said, with the "Town Hall" segment slated for 5:30 p. m. when panel reporters and moderators will pre-

Attention Voters!

I want to thank each person who voted for me, and the platform I represented. The neglect of the business and residential areas in West Las Vegas, where the greatest number of minority residents reside -- without representation -- was made a clear issue in my campaign.

Obviously, 2,500 Voters felt the same way.

Mayer Gragson and City Commissioners, I leave you with this mandate.

Thank you, and God bless you all.
