Employment Security Department

CARSON CITY--The ceiling for weekly unemployment benefits will be slightly higher effective July 3 because Nevadans earned more money in 1971.

The top limit for weekly unemployment checks is tallied each July to meet one-half the average the previous year by workers in covered unemployment, said the Nevada Employment Department.

In 1971, Nevada workers in covered employment earned an average $152.52 a week, up nearly $7.50 over the previous year. As a result, weekly unemployment checks in July through next June will range from $16-$77, compared to a high of $73 the previous corresponding period.

Department chief Robert Archie said only about half of eligible jobless Nevadans qualify for the top rate.

Archie said Nevadans now drawing unemployment benefits will not qualify for the new maximum. It applies only to jobless persons who file their benefits claims of this year on or after July 3.

The maximum on weekly unemployment checks across the nation ranges from a low of $49 in Mississippi to a high of $129 in Connecticut.

Several states in the West have higher maximum weekly benefits than Nevada. They include Colorado at $85, Utah at $81 and Washington at $78. The top unemployment benefit in Hawaii is $90 a week and in Alaska is $85. California is just under Nevada at $75.

Archie said Nevadans' record weekly wages which set the new maximum for jobless benefits may have an "ironic bearing" on the number of unemployed persons.

He noted some unemployment may be partly due to increased overtime for workers with employers reluctant to hire additional help. The overtime pay in turn would hike the average weekly wage, the employment chief said.
