

CLARK COUNTY COMMUNITY COLLEGE

To insure that qualified students will not be denied a college education because of financial need, Clark County Community College has implemented a complete financial aid program, according to Thomas Brown, newly-appointed financial aid officer at the community college.

Financial aid is available for full-time students currently enrolled at the college and for those new students anticipating full-time enrollment for the fall semester.

The new college offers tuition waivers, student employment, work-study programs, scholarships, educational opportunity grants, and a variety of loans. Most financial aid is contingent on the applicant maintaining at least a C average and being regularly enrolled at the college as a full-time student.

"It is only with the assistance of interested individuals, groups, business firms, governmental agencies, and church organizations that the community college will be able to identify and assist needy, capable students in financing their college education," Brown said.

Students planning full-time enrollment for the fall semester at the community college should file applications for financial aid by July 31.

Several University of Nevada Regents scholarships are available for minority group students who demonstrate scholastic ability. These scholarships, covering tuition and fees, are offered to exceptionally needy students and require the recommendation of the financial aid officer.

Education opportunity grants, a maximum of $1000 per academic year matched by other financial aid, are offered to students of extreme financial need who show academic or creative potential. Students must maintain full-time status and apply each year to reinstate the grant, based on continual economic need.

The college's work-study program is open to full-time students who are in need of earnings from part-time employment in order to pursue a course of study. The program involves a maximum of 15 hours work per week in a job approved for work-study. To qualify, students must complete a financial aid application and show a desire as well as need for employment.

In addition, the college offers other campus employment. Amount of eligibility is determined by available resources and the college's approved budgeted expenditures for the year. This employment provides the same hourly wage as the work-study program and is available only for full-time students.

Available loans include national defense student loans, and both short and intermediate term emergency loans.

The long-term national defense student loans are available for full-time students who demonstrate financial need and academic promise. Maximum loan is $1000 per academic year. The amount varies according to the student need. Repayment begins nine months after graduation or upon termination of continuous studies.

Loans from the united student aid fund are available to Nevada residents who are full-time students at the community college. The maximum is $1500 per academic year. A seven per cent interest charge begins nine months after graduation or upon withdrawal from the college.

Any full-time student in good academic standing who needs immediate financial assistance may qualify for an emergency loan. The maximum for an emergency loan is $50 for a 60-day period or $500 for the academic year. A service
